Morse Girl Found on Beach at Miami

Today

To Hire 600,000 Men.
Wanted, 1,000,000 Pledges.
Little Miss Guinan.

THE MOST IMPORTANT news in the world in general and for future generations is Lloyd George's promise to diminish unemployment in Britain by putting 600,000 men to work at once.

Even the most stodgy Tories no longer laugh at statements by Lloyd George. He arranged their finances before the war, financed the war, built ammunition factories and supplied ammunition, then ran the war.

He says he will employ the idle "without costing the taxpayers a penny," putting them at useful work which will more than pay what it costs to hire them."

American statesmen should read Lloyd George's book on the subject, price sixpence.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union wishes at least 1,000,000 persons between 14 and 30 to sign a pledge to obey the Eighteenth Amendment.

It's a good idea to select Americans from 14 to 30. They seem to do most of the drinking now.

If high school girls and other young ladies continue at the present rate we shall have fathers and mothers outside the night clubs at 4 in the morning singing, "Daughter, dear daughter, come home with me now."

Miss Texas Guinan, who greets her night club customers appropriately with "Hello, suckers," is alleged by prohibition agents to sell them champagne for $26 a bottle, is on trial before "12 good men and true," middle-aged.

Covered with diamonds, the "little girl" says she cannot understand why a great, big country like this should want to keep her from making a living.

The prosecuting attorney said, "This lady's business is to make whoopee."

Can anybody hope that 12 gentlemen, even middle-aged, will object to that, in these days?

Wall Street was "unsettled," didn't know what to think about anything.

From Cleveland Harry Wickersford wires: "Please tell the Federal Reserve Board to attack to their next warning a list of the stocks they consider good short sales, and at what prices they think the same should be covered."

The Federal Reserve, no doubt, sincerely desires to protect the public against itself, but seems not to know how to go about it. Part of the amusing situation is this: Corporations that don't need money have been borrowing from the Federal Reserve on commercial paper, then sending that money into Wall Street to be lent at 15 and 20 per cent as call money.

It might be well for the Federal Reserve to let the banks borrow direct on collateral loans.

The Bank of England devotes 20 per cent of its resources to such loans, protecting security buyers from usurious rates.

Britons apparently can be trusted to use sound investing judgment. Americans can't. British won't stand bossing. Americans, as Northcliffe said, are "docile."

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, in Paris, says there is nothing "in the report that General Motors has purchased for $50,000,000 the Citroen, biggest automobile plant in France."

General Motors, however, HAS bought the great German Opel automobile works. A while ago that was denied.

Cardinal O'Connell, chief of the Catholic hierarchy in America, refers to Prof. Einstein's "relativity and utterly befogged notions about space and time" as having a basis "to produce a universal doubt about God and His creation."

The cardinal said he did not wish "at this time" to accuse Prof. Einstein of "deliberately wishing to destroy the Christian faith," but the cardinal described the Einstein theory as a cloak "beneath which lies the ghastly apparition of atheism."

Einstein, in Germany, said he did not wish to enter into any discussion and that Cardinal O'Connell's statement "left him cold."

It would not have left him cold had it been made in the days of Galileo or Giordano Bruno.

Helen Wills, champion California tennis player and champion American girl, will meet Queen Mary. The Queen will see something worth while.

She has already met Miss Ruth Draper. After Helen Wills is presented, the Queen will know two of the finest young women this country has produced. Fortunately for us, we have many more at home like them.

City Power Bill Strangled

LINDY HOPS FROM TEXAS; KEEPS NIGHT TRIP SECRET

LOBBY WINS BIG POWER VICTORY

THE power and light lords chuckled today.

Their lobbyists had scored heavily.

The draft of the city power bill referred to the Committee on Ways and Means proved it.

It bristled with jokers and loopholes. While on the face a constructive measure, it has been so distorted and modified by a series of redrafting that it will reach the Legislature virtually without teeth.

Its chief aim has been cleverly sidetracked. The original draft made it possible for cities and towns to buy out a private light and power company at a price to be fixed by the Department of Public Utilities and to establish a plant of their own if the company declined to sell for the price determined.

Under the draft reported by the

LOST GIRL IS FOUND IN SOUTH

Rosamond Morse, 17-year-old Brookline school girl, missing since January 4, has been found in Miami, Fla., and starts home tonight accompanied by a detective, her father, Edward W. Morse, Jr., announced today.

She was found on Miami Beach enjoying the sunshine and surf while search for her went on throughout the United States and several foreign lands.

A Miami detective, working in co-operation with the Watts Detective Agency of Boston, picked her out of the crowd and after long questioning succeeded in getting her to admit her identity.

Her father talked with her on the telephone at 3 o'clock this morning and verified that it was she.

A photograph published in a Miami newspaper caused information to be mailed to the detective agency through which the Boston agency was in communication, and thus led to her discovery and identification.

Rosamond is a blonde hair, the

ONE SAVED 12 FLEE IN FIRE

One maiden was rescued after being overcome by smoke, and a dozen employes were forced to flee by way of a rear fire escape today when a two-alarm blaze of unknown origin swept the four upper floors of a five-story brick building at 3-113 Haverhill st., doing damage of $5000.

The one victim was Thomas Genthner, D., head of the firm of Genthner & Stevens, machinists, occupying the 3d and 4th floors of the structure. Discovering the flames in the front of the fourth floor, he rushed to rear rooms, where his workers were busy. As the latter made their way hastily to the fire escape, Genthner plunged into the smoke once more, attempting to reach a telephone.

When their employer failed to reappear after a reasonable interval, two workmen, Lawrence Ward of Roxbury and Frank Norton of Somerville, followed him into the building. They found him unconscious back to the telephone, which he had knocked from its stand as he fainted. They carried him to the fire escape and applied first aid methods.

Morris Herman and Edwin Barbour, employed on the fifth floor, also fled to safety down the rear fire escape.

Maritime Sarah Woolson of Malden occupant of the first floor of the building, had called the fire department. A second alarm was sounded upon the arrival of the first apparatus. Traffic in the vicinity of the North Station was tied up for an hour.

Mr. Coolidge has been a policyholder in the company he will now help direct for 37 years.

To date this fee has been $20 in gold, but Kingsley announced today that in the future it would be $50. This means that Mr. Coolidge may receive as high as $600 a year.

LONE EAGLE ON WAY TO N. Y. TO PAY HIS TRIBUTE TO HERRICK

Brownsville, Tex., April 10—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who arrived here unexpectedly from Mexico at 9:30 o'clock this morning after he had been reported "lost," took the air again at 11 o'clock today for an unannounced destination, probably New York.

He arrived in Brownsville from the interior of Mexico where he had spent the night after taking off from Mexico City yesterday.

The flier's arrival ended anxiety in Mexico and the United States as to his safety.

Lindbergh said it was of interest to himself and no one else where he spent the night, and explained he had had no intention of flying beyond the border of Mexico yesterday, when he left Mexico City. Friends said he might have stopped at a ranch near Tampico.

"I regret very much that the press has seen fit by an unauthorized statement to cause unnecessary anxiety for my safety," Lindbergh said.

LINDBERGH LANDS AT BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS, AND HOPS OFF AGAIN

It was noticed his airplane carried camping equipment, giving credence to the belief that he may have halted alone far from a city last night.

Col. Lindbergh took airport attaches he might tell them on his next trip through Brownsville just where he had spent last night. He also dropped a hint that in a short time he might disappear for two or three days, but that won't be a sign anything is wrong."

Failure of Col. Lindbergh to reach the border last night caused the Mexican government to institute a check of airfields and airmen on the American side of the line also became concerned over his whereabouts.

Lights at Kelly Field, San Antonio, were kept on until late last night and this morning officers there discussed sending out searching planes in the belief that Col. Lindbergh might have been forced down.

The flier was well rested apparently when he arrived here, but was hungry and ate a hearty breakfast at the Brownsville airport.

He would not announce to what point he would go from Brownsville, but was expected to fly eastward to be at New York Saturday

Anne and Family Rejoice Over Lindbergh's Safety

Mexico City, April 10—There was rejoicing in Mexico City today, especially at the United States embassy, when news was flashed from Brownsville, Tex., that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has landed there.

Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, his daughter Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, fiances of Col. Lindbergh, and other members of the family said they had felt no anxiety, for they believed from the first that Lindbergh would reach his destination safely, even if he were delayed by some reason or other.

Belief was growing here, before news was received of Lindbergh's landing in Brownsville, that he was attempting a non-stop flight to New York.

This belief was strengthened by the fact that the colonel's Curtiss Falcon was filled to capacity, the tanks held 325 gallons or enough to keep the machine in the air for 32 hours.

Lindbergh carried nearly 20 sandwiches of various kinds wrapped in greased paper, a big bottle of milk and two canteens, each holding more than a quart of water.

Miss Morrow had superintended the packing of the lunch and was determined that her betrothed should not go hungry. She even saw to it that there was a napkin in the lunch kit.

Despite the general optimism at the embassy early today, other persons in Mexico City suggested fear that Lindbergh might have flown over the revolutionary war region and that rebels or even federals might have mistaken him for an enemy flier and molested him.

In his last trip here Lindbergh flew hundreds of miles out of his way to Brownsville from the Pacific coast to escape the area affected by the fighting.

Rome saw an ominous reminder of hazards in the fact he wore a parachute when he arrived in Mexico City. It was the first time he had been seen with one here.

The last seen of him here was at 12:30 yesterday, when he appeared over the American embassy and zoomed low three times in his usual farewell to his fiances, Miss Morrow, before heading northward.

The airman apparently took no one into his confidence concerning his route. His fiances, Anne Morrow, could have known his plans, but she has been no more communicative to reporters than the colonel is. Miss Morrow this morning did not appear in the least disturbed or alarmed. The earlier reports that the colonel's whereabouts were not known.

Others seemed surprised when they learned Lindbergh had only arrived today at Brownsville.

Col. Alexander MacNab, United States military attache, who accompanied Lindbergh to the flying field when he left Mexico City yesterday, said: "Where has he been all this time?"

Other embassy attaches also asserted they were ignorant of where the colonel had been.

for the arrival of the body of Ambassador Herrick from France.

Col. Lindbergh took off from Valhuena Field in Mexico City at 1:20 (eastern standard time) yesterday and had been expected to land in Brownsville late in the afternoon, the distance being 485 miles in a direct route. He would have been delayed two hours if he came by Eagle Pass, it was estimated. As it was, he arrived 22 hours out of Mexico City.

A check of northern border points by the Mexican Government brought reports from Piedras Negras, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, Tex., that a plane believed to have been Lindbergh's passed over the city at 7 p. m. (8 p. m. eastern standard time) yesterday.

A Mexico City newspaper even published a report he had stopped there, reiled and refueled, and gone on to an unannounced destination.

A check failed to confirm either report, however, and at Eagle Pass city officials and residents denied that a plane had passed over the city or alighted nearby.

The terrain over which Col. Lindbergh had to fly en route to the Texas border, no matter which route he chose, was that of high mountains and rough desert plateau, with a narrow stretch of tropical jungle along the eastern coast.

A landing in much of this area would have been dangerous under even the most favorable circumstances, due to the high altitude and the roughness of the country.

soldiers, the federal force under the command of Gen. Abelardo Rodriguez, was marching east from Baja California, to reinforce the Naco loyal garrison. A squad of United States Infantrymen camped at Sasbe, Ariz., said they had checked the movement of these federal troops with a field radio set as far as San Miguel, Sonora.

With the arrival at Agua Prieta of the rebel commander-in-chief the International line from Naco, Ariz., to Douglas, Ariz., was being closely patrolled by United States cavalrymen.

Eighteen United States army airplanes from Fort Huachaca, Ariz., flew along the border line between Douglas and Nogales yesterday.

Two armored tanks left by the forces of Gen. Topete just outside the Naco trenches when the rebels withdrew from the attack on Naco last Saturday were still there today. It was believed that federal soldiers hesitated to attempt to move them for fear they are mined.

ESCOBAR IN SONORA

Gen. J. Gonzalo Escobar, revolutionary commander-in-chief, assumed personal command of rebel armies in Sonora today as his forces, retreating from Chihuahua and Sinaloa, came pouring into the state from two directions. Apparently they were heading for Naco Sonora, held by a little garrison of federal soldiers.

Gen. Escobar arrived at Agua Prieta, 16 miles east of here, by airplane, having flown from Casas Grandes, Chihuahua. He was met by Gen. Fausto Topete, rebel commander, who has repeatedly attacked the Naco garrison without success. Topete's troops remained encamped just south of the garrison.

Ship Goes Aground, but Is Refloated

Woods Hole, April 10—Four hours after she went aground today, near Nobska Point light, the freighter Ala of the American Diamond Line, bound from Boston to Philadelphia, was pulled into deep water by the coast guard cutter Acushnet. The Acushnet then took the freighter in tow for New York, with a slight leak astern.

New Hunt for Lost Fliers

Sydney, N. S. W., April 10 (AP)—Hopes for safety of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and the missing Southern Cross fliers were not entirely abandoned today, although they seemed to rest on frail ground.

A relief plane flying over Drysdale Mission station exchanged signals with mission workers there, and gained the information that the Southern Cross was down between that station and Port George.

A point on the coast about 90 miles distant was specified and the pilot was led to believe the mission workers had gained their information from bushmen or natives.

PROFITS SPLIT A FORTUNE TO TEX GUINAN

New York, April 10 (INS)—Texas Guinan, entertainer de luxe, was shown to be one of the biggest "bread-and-butter" girls along Broadway or any other pike today when a "diamond-studded" contract for her night club services was revealed at her trial in federal court for maintaining an alleged nuisance in connection with the sale of liquor at the Salon Royale, Dusk-to-Dawn Club.

The contract read before the jury revealed:

1—That Texas had the option of taking either fifty per cent of the profits of the club or fifty per cent of the "convert charges."

2—That Texas was guaranteed $1000 a week drawing account.

3—That her name should precede even her employer's in any electric light advertising.

4—That she was to be the sole "star entertainer."

Texas chose to exercise taking 50 per cent of the night club's profits and during a sample two-week period she received $3,388.29 for her little dinner pail.

This was testified by Mortimer Lalster, accountant, over the strenuous objection of a defense counsel.

But Texas frequently even did better than this. She averaged between $2000 and $3000 a week under her option of half the profits, although several weeks she was out-distanced by the convert charge totals.

In the two weeks' period from May 15 to June 1, that quaint American custom—the convert charge—returned $12,886 against only $5,182.54, half the profits.

MORSE GIRL ON WAY BACK TO PARENTS

outstanding feature of the description of her that was telegraphed and cabled to every part of the globe, made it possible for the detective to single her out and persist in his quizzing of her until she admitted she was the Brookline girl.

Considerable mystery still attaches to her actions since she slipped away from home after the family had gone to bed on the night of Jan. 4, leaving her father and stepmother, the former's aged sisters, and her private school friends without any inkling of her plans.

She was staying at the Savoy Hotel when found in the popular southern winter resort. After she was induced to leave there to spend the night at the home of the head of the detective agency and consented to accept the companionship of a detective on the trip north.

Her father, overjoyed at knowing she is alive and well, said today, at the office of G. Clifton Watts, who has supervised the search for Rosamond for three months without a letup, that he forgives her.

"It is a great weight off my mind and the minds of the whole family," he said. "I felt all along that my daughter would be found alive and unharmed, but nevertheless it is an indescribable relief.

"I am very grateful to press and public and the Watts agency for the help that was given me. When Rosamond arrives in Boston I hope to meet her alone and have a long, sympathetic talk with her. I am sure everything will be all right in the future. I did not question her on the telephone about her trip, but she told me she went to Florida by easy stages."

The arrangement for Rosamond to talk with her father on the telephone, which, it developed, was just what was needed to make her consent to return home, was made by G. Clifton Watts after he had received the report from Miami and thought out what to do. Financial arrangements for bringing the girl home were made today by the father.

"I am well and happy. I have been here a little while. I came down by easy stages, but will go home now," were the words the long-sought girl used in talking with her father over the telephone, according to Morse.

ONE IN MAINE ROW WANTS TO FIGHT

Augusta, Me., April 10 (AP)—Charles Murray of Bangor, a member of the State Highway Commission who refused to follow the lead of the other two commissioners and resign after a legislative committee report exonerated the commission, today filed with the House a petition for public hearing to remove "the stigma of suspicion" which he said would "remain upon him."

Clyde H. Smith, Skowhegan, chairman, and Edward T. Clifford, Winthrop, resigned shortly after the special investigating committee reported.

The highway tangle started a month ago, when former Secretary of Agriculture Jardine advised the governor no federal aid road funds would be approved until the completion of the commission was changed.

In its report the committee said there had been "disorganization, friction and turmoil" throughout the department, and recommended there be a change in administration, but that "no misfeasance or malfeasance in office" could be laid against any commission r because of the alleged cement shortage.

It was specified that the commissioners may be heard if they desire.

Find 2 Jokers in City Power Bill

legislative committee on light and power such serious barriers are raised that it will be almost impossible for cities and towns to engage in business.

This is due to a joker, which reads:

"If the owner fails for a period of 30 days after the determination of the department (Public Utilities) to convey such property to the said city or town, or to apply to the Supreme Judicial Court for a determination of its value, as provided in Section 43, the city or town may establish such plant

Sentiment Suddenly Shifts on New Bill

So many obstacles can be raised under this phase of the bill that the average municipality would be discouraged from making the venture.

It had been expected that the draft reported by the joint committee on light and power would be submitted on the floor of the House today, but because it involved expense in investigation, the proponents demanded that it be first referred to the committee on ways and means.

Sentiment at the State House shifted suddenly today. On Tuesday the consensus of opinion was that the measure would be adopted by the House, but would meet stiff opposition in the Senate because of the dissenting votes of Senator Angier L. Goodwin of Melrose, Senate chairman of the committee on light and power and Senator Erland F. Fish of Brookline, majority leader in the Senate.

It developed that in its modified and toothless form, the bill will be adopted by the Senate with some debate. President Bacon of the Senate is reported to be satisfied with the re-draft and Speaker Saltonstall is also reported to favor it.

What is interpreted as the second joker is found in Section 5. The portion cited as objectionable reads:

"Such value shall be estimated without enhancement on account of the future earning capacity or of the good will or of the going value or of the cost of establishing the business other than the cost of organization or of privileges derived from rights in the public ways including, as an element of value, the damages, if any, caused by the severance of said property from other property of the owner, etc."

Too wide a latitude in fixing valuations is said to be afforded by this section in the opinion of proponents.

White Sees Obstacle in Way of New Plan

A sub-committee was appointed to make the new draft consisting of Senate Chairman Goodwin, House Chairman Brooks, and Representatives Brainerd, Portmore and White.

Rep. Joseph C. White of Jamaica Plain, who was the only Democrat to serve on the sub-committee, said today:

"I concur in principle with the report of the sub-committee, but believe that the best interests of the municipalities can be served by the straight repeal of the existing law.

"Under the present law the municipality must buy out the existing plant of the company now supplying power and light, if it plans to go into the lighting and power business.

"This law imposes an insurmountable obstacle in the courts of any city or town because it entails long litigation in the courts to determine just what value should be placed on existing plants.

"In spite of arguments against public ownership, the records show that municipally-owned plants are supplying light and power much cheaper than plants privately owned.

"What we must guard against in the interest of the public, are loopholes which will enable companies to give inflated valuation on property if sold to a city or town.

"I have in mind the case of the Worcester and Cambridge companies which were forced to reduce their rates by decision of the Supreme Court after long delayed agitation.

"These companies based their arguments for continued high rates on the fact that their plants were of much greater value today than when they were acquired. This contention, if upheld by the courts would force the consumers to pay rates upon an inflated value and not on actual investments of said companies.

"The State gave to these companies a monopolistic right to conduct business in the various communities providing that the rates of these private companies would yield a fair return on their investment.

"For such companies to attempt to sell back to the Commonwealth and its citizens rights which were vested in them by special privilege under the guise of 'good will values,' is on its face absurd and audacious.

"The Worcester Electric Light Co. valued a pond on its site at more than $1,000,000 when it was reported to have paid only $77,000 or thereabout for the body of water. This is but a slight example of what cities and towns might be forced to pay in purchasing private plants, unless some definite provision is made to guard against inflated valuations.

"I believe firmly that the law should limit payment in excess of the actual cost of the plant's physical properties and not allow charges for intangible values, such as 'cost of organization,' 'good concern,' 'good will' and similar fantastic items.

"I believe that prompt action should be taken on a measure which is of such vital importance not only to the people of my own State, but to New England and the country at large. Big elements are involved and power must not be used for whatever the future may bring."

Maine to Vote on Power Export Bill in September

Augusta, Me., April 10 (AP)—The voters of Maine will decide in a special referendum in September whether surplus hydro-electric power shall be exported from the state. Governor Gardiner today signed the Carlton bill which provides for such export if approved by the people.

Under the so-called Fernald law, passed 20 years ago, the export of power is forbidden. Sponsors of the Carlton measure declare it is a repeal of the Fernald law, but will allow export under supervision and permit.

Two amendments provide for excise tax of 4 per cent on gross profit of exporting companies and for the voiding of the entire measure if any part is declared unconstitutional.

TWO HIG CALLS 'L' BILL A 'BAREFACED STEAL'

PUTS DEFICITS ON SHOULDERS OF RIDERS

By REP. JAMES J. TWOHIG

The redrafted Harriman bill, extending public control of the Boston Elevated, as recommended by its sub-committee to the full legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, I regard as one of the most bare-faced steals ever contemplated in this State.

The 1918 public control bill had the redeeming feature of an emergency measure. The road was broken down, facing bankruptcy. Common stock was selling for $27 a share. Its credit was gone. It had not paid a common dividend for two or three years. War conditions prevailed. Prices were high and the purchasing value of the dollar was low. A 5-cent fare and a nickel was almost a negligible amount.

FLEA FOR RELIEF

In these circumstances the road pleaded for relief, and a generous Legislature abrogated the 5-cent fare contract that the company had jammed through in 1897, and enacted the original public control bill.

Ten years have passed. The war crisis has long since passed into history. The road has been rehabilitated, modernized and equipped. New cars, rails, ties, powerhouses, buses have been purchased. More than $50,000,000 of the car riders' and the taxpayers' good money have been poured into it. The fares were doubled, and while the physical value of the road has been tremendously heightened, the service, except in a few instances, is in a deplorable condition.

PERMANENT MEASURE

While all this was going on the stockholders have collected $35,000,000 more out of the people. Now what do they propose?

Led by their stoutest strategist, engineer, financier and expert dreamer, Mr. Harriman—recently appointed to the board of public trustees—they propose to make permanent, or for at least 98 years, what was originally an emergency measure.

They propose to continue guaranteed dividends, 5 per cent for common and 6½ per cent bonds for preferred, and increase the cost of rides by assessing one-half the expenses of all future rapid transit extensions on the general taxpayer. What difference does it make whether you pay your proportionate increase at the fare box or at the tax collector's office? You pay just the same.

In the old bill, if a deficit occurred in operating expenses, the trustees would go to the State House and demand any amount they required. This was thereafter added to the tax levy of the cities and towns of the metropolitan district. They got about $4,000,000 this way and but $1,250,000 has not yet been paid back.

Doctor Marsh Scores Prudery in Social Hygiene Talk

"Prudery is no more a sign of virtue than a wig is of hair, for it is usually put on to hide a bald place," declared Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University, today, at the second annual luncheon of the Mass. Society for Social Hygiene at the Hotel Statler.

Dr. Marsh urged that boys be taught that there is honor and responsibility in fatherhood and girls that there is a sacredness in motherhood, and he took the stand that the problems of life must be discussed frankly if they are to be solved by coming generations.

Looseness outrages the individual in soul and body, outrages the home and wrecks the foundations on which the home rests, outrages society by poisoning the stream of social life, outrages the nation in that sin is a reproach to any people, outrages manhood, makes the race poorer, and outrages God," he said.

Officers elected for the coming year were Dr. Wilson G. Smillie, Boston, president; Dr. George H. Bigelow, honorary vice-president; Mrs. Maida E. Solomon, Boston, vice-president; Miss Mary E. Driscoll, Boston, secretary; Robert S. Tappan, Brookline, treasurer. No change was made in the executive committee.

Pastor Says Betting on Races Is O. K.

Miami, Fla., April 10 (AP)—There is nothing in the Bible to condemn pari-mutuel betting on horse races, in the opinion of the Rev. Everett S. Smith, pastor of the First Christian Church of Miami. The minister believes, on the contrary, that the pari-mutuel system "is honest, fair and square."

PAYMASTER OF U. S. S. VEGA MISSING; SOUGHT BY NAVY

CAN COLLECT AT SUNDAY BALL GAMES

Collections can be taken at Sunday ball games on city playgrounds this summer, Chairman Long of the Park Commission told the City Council committee on appropriations today.

Ever since the Sunday baseball trouble started in the council last fall this question has been bothering councillors, and they were elated at obtaining this statement today from Commissioner Long, who heretofore had maintained strict silence.

"All who want to play ball on public playgrounds on Sundays and who get the necessary permits will be safe from interference by police if they take up collections to defray expenses," he said.

"As the playgrounds are public property, nobody obtaining use of them will be allowed to charge admission, but I assure you they won't be bothered for passing the hat."

Asked if he had talked with police on the subject, Long said he had, and with that assurance he fully satisfied his questioners, Councillors Gallagher, Bowling, Ruby, Dowd and Donovan.

The Boston Airport has become such a busy place that it is now taking six hours of his time daily, Long also told the committee. He said all available space has been leased at the rate of $1000 a lot annually.

The committee is combing the mayor's 1929 budget, seeking to raise salaries of the rank and file wherever possible. Commissioner Long said he doubted if he could get along on the appropriation of $1,683,000 provided in the budget, but would try.

He had asked the mayor for $1,821,000. With amounts obtained from loan orders, the park department will spend about $3,000,000 this year, he said.

Chairman Thomas F. Hurley of the street commissioners agreed with some of the committee that Chief Engineer William J. Sullivan, who gets $4000 a year, should get at least $5000. He said Sullivan saved the city $25,000 on one project, not to mention many others. He also agreed that Joseph F. Sullivan, secretary of the commission, was very valuable. Secretary Sullivan is paid $3900.

STRIKERS PLAN TO CONTEST INJUNCTION

Notwithstanding the injunction issued by Judge Louis S. Cox restraining them from picketing certain shoe shops, leaders on strike in Boston will continue their fight for the so-called Boston agreement, it was announced today.

Members of the Independent Lasters' Union held a meeting behind closed doors at 987 Washington st., where they were addressed by Ernest Henry, business agent, and others.

Henry informed the strikers the union's answer to the injunction would be delivered Friday in court by Atty. Earl Jacobs, counsel for the union.

Henry said shops named in the injunction would not be picketed, but about twenty others, where strikes are in progress, would be. He said there are 1,000 lasters on strike.

Charles L. Baine, general secretary-treasurer of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, which has warned its members affiliated with the Independent Lasters' Union that they must return to work, scouted Henry's figures on the number of strikers.

"Anybody saying there are 1,000 men on strike is purveying wrong information," he said. An executive conference of officials of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union will be held later.

PORTER ADMITS SENDING BOMB TO ROOSEVELT

New York, April 10—Thomas Calleay, middle-aged porter at the general postoffice here, confessed to the federal authorities today that he mailed the bomb to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt which was found in the postoffice last Sunday.

He did it with the idea of being made a hero of, figuring that it would bring him promotion in the government service. It was Calleay who "found" the bomb on the postoffice floor and, for a day or two, some newspaper stories did make a hero of him.

Several years ago a porter in the Chicago postoffice was promoted after he had discovered a bomb.

DISAPPEARS AFTER TAKING TAXI

Lieut. Robert J. Monteith, paymaster of the U. S. S. Vega, naval supply ship, disappeared from the Charlestown Navy Yard Friday, it was learned today.

His absence was reported to the police, and when he failed to return the Vega sailed for New York yesterday after futile attempts had been made to open the ship's safe in which there was $10,000.

Local naval officials were careful to point out that no charge had been lodged against Lieut. Monteith except overstaying his leave, and that if necessary any further action would be taken by Commander Francis M. Robinson, in command of the Vega.

Before sailing for the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where the supply ship will remain 10 days, Commander Robinson reported the absence of Lieut. Monteith to the bureau of navigation at Washington as required by regulations.

Lieut. Monteith, whose wife makes her home in Washington, was last seen at the navy yard, Friday night, between 8 and 9 o'clock. At that time, clad in civilian clothing, he boarded a taxicab, which, later investigation revealed, dropped him at Scollay sq.

He was due back at the yard at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and his failure to return was reported by the officer of the day. No especial anxiety was felt, as it was believed that the officer might have been delayed by any one of a number of reasons, but when Monday arrived and he had not appeared, naval officials became worried.

Lieut. Monteith's disappearance was then reported to Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley by Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the First Naval District, with a request that he be sought.

Traffic Congestion Costs

TRAFFIC congestion in Boston costs slow-moving trucks the staggering total of $28,000,000 a year, New York pays tribute of $1,000,000 on every week day for trucks held in traffic.

These figures were computed on a basis of seven cents for each hour the truck is held up, Prof. Miller McClintock, traffic expert, told the Women's City Club. He was introduced to members by Miss Leslie Hopkinson, public affairs chairman.

"Such congestion is having a serious effect on retail stores," McClintock said, "It is causing an abnormal decentralization of big stores all over the country and involves the maintenance and cost of conducting business in several different locations. This cost must inevitably be paid by the consumer.

"Owners of large stores are greatly disturbed by this tendency to move farther out, for it affects property values and makes the cost of selling goods in two or more locations almost prohibitive.

"The cost of reconstructing Boston's streets to provide through traffic arteries would involve sums too vast to be considered, but the speed development in motors makes rapid motor transit lanes inevitable for the safety of life and limb."

The live parking regulation on the Common side of Tremont st. has reduced traffic entering Washington from side streets 25 per cent, he announced and remarked that this very helpful regulation is not even known to hundreds of women drivers.

The automatic traffic signal system recommended by Prof. McClintock in his report to the city planning bureau, will be in operation on Washington and Tremont sts. by the middle of the summer, he announced.

LYNN WOMAN'S CLUB

"It is no longer good form or good business to permit a city's dog officer to act also as its truant officer," Mrs. Madeline L. Mathes, Lynn schools attendance director, told the Lynn Woman's Club at its "Community Day" program.

"The old-time truant officer who did police duty on boys who played hookey has been replaced with men trained in social service work who look for causes and not primarily for effect.

"Because truancy leads to delinquency it is necessary for the reason for every absence from school to be thoroughly understood by the attendance officers. To this end four attendance officers visit every school in the city every day, make weekly reports and hold frequent conferences."

Although the attendance department has been in operation under this new system only one year, Lynn has had 1016 cases of truancy out of 20,000 school children in public and parochial schools and only 25 of these cases reached court. Thirteen were found to be habitual truants and had to be sent to the Essex County training school, she reported.

"Public schools exist for the child," Mrs. Mathes continued. "The community provides expensive teachers and equipment to give the child opportunity for acquiring the knowledge necessary to himself and the social well being of the community. Unless it also provides an adequate, efficient attendance department, the whole program is, in a measure, a failure," Mrs. Mathes said.

Film Gone... Teeth regain sparkling whiteness

Film, too, is the source of serious tooth and gum disorders. Dentists urge special film-removing dentifrice.

DON'T be discouraged if teeth are not white and sparkling. You have 9 chances in 10 that they are merely coated with a dingy film.

Film absorbs the stains from food and smoking and gives that cloudy look. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Film hardens into tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. To remove film, use the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film and easily remove it in gentle safety to enamel.

Don't expect the same results from old-time dentifrices. See for once and all how white and bright teeth really are. Get Pepsodent at any drug counter, or write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 1104 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

PATHE TO FILM NEWSPAPER STORY

By LOUELLA PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, Universal Service, Inc.

NEW YORK, April 10—Jed Harris, New York stage producer, has just sold Pathe the screen rights to "For Two Cents," a newspaper story written by George F. Brooks. The interesting feature of this little sale is that the talkie version will be made immediately and the stage production will follow next year.

What will happen? Will the public be interested in a play it has previously seen on the silver sheet? It's certainly an experiment, and a mated question that I should not care to answer without some thought.

But I do know that Robert Armstrong, who will be featured, ought to help the talkie. Young Armstrong, who came West to play on the stage, is regarded in Hollywood as a comer.

Ralph Block who has supervised most of Young Armstrong's pictures, including "The Cop," is in charge of the newspaper story, and he has appointed Gregory La Cava as director.

YOU'D know, wouldn't you, that Sam Goldwyn is too good a showman to miss having Ronald Colman here for the premiere of "Bulldog Drummond." I hear it whispered that Sam has a success, and why shouldn't he capitalize on his first talkie? Anyway, Ronald Colman is due here June 22, and all the film writers are sharpening their pencils to be in readiness to give him the big interview.

"Bulldog Drummond" will open at the Apollo Theater instead of at the George M. Cohan as was originally planned. Sam, you see, is superstitious. The Apollo housed "Stella Dallas," perhaps his most spectacular screen success, and now he believes it will be lucky for him with "Bulldog Drummond." Mr. Goldwyn is due himself in a week or so.

YOUNG David Selznick, a son of Lewis J. Selznick, and B. P. Schubert's right hand man, knows what it is all about. He can pick stories and he can see when stars and stories are misfits. Just by way of example, "The Prince Consort" was chosen for Adolphe Menjou.

Young Selznick had a better idea. Why not Menjou for "Grounds for Divorce" and Maurice Chevalier for "Prince Consort?" Now it's all arranged with Ernest Lubitsch direct directing Chevalier and Marcel de Sano megaphoning Menjou. Ruth Chatterton, by the bye, will play opposite Menjou—and one more thing—I forgot to add that Chevalier will sing in "The Prince Consort," and it is to have musical interpolations.

IMAGINE my surprise to walk into the Paramount Theater Sunday night and find Hollywood Sammy Cohen as the headliner on the program. Sammy did his snake dance and all of his contortion stunts that have been featured at so many dance contests in so many of Hollywood's restaurants. He had a few new numbers, most of them referring to his Hollywood. I will say for that young man that he did Hollywood proud, for the applause he received was flattering to say the least.

GLORIA SWANSON'S marquis is on the job in Paris. We have to hand him a few bouquets for snatching Constance Bennett away from the nose of the other film companies and signing her on a contract for Gloria. At the time the elder daughter of Richard Bennett married the young millionaire Plant, she was one of the most comely young women on the screen.

CUT INCOME TAX HALF, URGES MANSFIELD

Criticising the "inequality" and "unfairness" of the present federal tax on earned incomes, Frederick W. Mansfield, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, went on record today as advocating at least 50 per cent cut in the tax rate assessed against professional or salaried earnings as compared with the rate of taxation on income obtained from investment.

"I am very much interested in your campaign for the reduction of the federal tax on earned incomes," he said. "it seems too plain for argument that a professional man who, after half a lifetime of effort, has finally come to the place where he can earn by his own personal services $25,000 a year, but who has no other income from any source, ought not be compelled to pay to the Federal Government as large a tax as some other man who, without any personal effort of his own, has acquired $500,000 which he has invested in gilt-edged 5 per cent bonds and from which he derives an income of $25,000.

"One is a tax upon human effort and human brains and the other is a tax upon an automatic income which, if it requires brains to produce it, certainly does not require for such production anything of the brains of the person who happens to own the bonds.

"In actual practice a professional man is taxed at a much higher rate than the bond holder. The professional man has no means of escape and is obliged to pay a tax on his full net income; but the income of the bond holder is very often not fully taxed because of exemptions and deductions which are largely theoretical.

"There is, to be sure, under the present law a credit for earned income, but it is so restricted and limited that it is almost negligible."

Bushman in Love With Cuban Girl

New York, April 10 (AP)—Francis X. Bushman is in love with Cuba and a Cuban. Back from the island he stressed its superiority to Hollywood as a place for making films and volunteered the information that the third Mrs. Bushman would be a native whose first name is Consuelita.

In Comic Opera

Mrs. Blanche Kelly is in the cast of "The Chimes of Normandy," to be given by Somerville Knights of Columbus.

All members of the Catholic clergy in Somerville, as well as prominent city officials, have been invited to attend the annual show of Mt. Benedict Council, Knights of Columbus.

The production is "The Chimes of Normandy," a three-act comic opera, and will be staged in K. of C. Hall, Highland ave., Somerville, on Tuesday evening, April 16 and 17.

Sixty members of the Mt. Benedict Choristers have been rehearsing for weeks under the direction of John B. Whoriskey, director of music in the Cambridge schools. Proceeds will be devoted to the council charity fund. General dancing will follow the show on both nights.

Prominent in the cast are: Edna L. McNamara, Mrs. Blanche Kelly, Florence Hubert, Julia Kelleher, Mary TaKash, Mrs. Grace Hughes, J. Ralph McDonald, Samuel P. Nevins, Robert J. Leonard, Herbert G. Mazee, Dr. George R. Whoriskey, Charles E. Willworth and James E. Walsh. Grand Knight John E. McAvoy has appointed Deputy Grand Knight Philip Welch to head the show committee.

Two Gay Nymphs Do 'Spring Song' Dance on Bank of Brook

The nymph-and-faun department of the current spring (if this be spring) checked off two respondents to the annual urge today when it became known that Evelyn Blank and Mary Blank, two West Medford girls of charm and talent, had stripped in toto on the banks of Alewife Brook in Somerville and had danced in ecstacy and abandon.

Evelyn and Mary will be considerably disturbed, say 15 years from now, when the old scrapbook is trotted out and they become fully aware that there were a police case back in 1929.

Telephone calls to the police from Roger Whittemore of Bromfield rd., West Somerville, and Charles Tevlin, caretaker at Dilboy Field, in Somerville, sent Sergt. Fulton and Patrolman Lyon to the field, where it was reported that the two entirely unclad ladies were cavorting beside the stream.

When teh officers arrived they found that Tevlin had corralled the nymphs and had placed them under cover in the locker room.

Evelyn, who is five years old, and Mary, who is three and a half, were bundled in blankets and taken to their homes a mile away.

They said they had decided to go in bathing in the brook and had thrown all their clothes in the stream, to float away. Then, finding the water too cold, they decided merely to dance on the bank.

MISSING MAN IS FOUND DEAD

Worcester, April 10—A few hours after being reported missing today, William F. Jose, 52, of Woodland st., was found drowned in a bathtub in the New City Hotel.

Jose, manager of the C. F. Adams Co., at 16 High st., only a block away from the hotel, registered at 3 p. m. yesterday, stating that he had a cold and wished to take a hot bath.

When he had not arrived home early today his wife notified the police and late editions of the morning papers carried the article.

It was read by a hotel clerk, who recalled the name Jose as scrawled on the register. Police were called and when they entered the fourth-floor room assigned to Jose they found him lifeless in the water-filled bathtub.

Mrs. Jose told police her husband had taken an unusually affectionate farewell yesterday morning when he left for his place of business and he did not take his car as was his custom.

Mail Carrier Freed

Portland, Me., April 10—Verdict of not guilty was reported by United States District Court jury in a postal theft case against Harry C Sullivan, a Bath mail carrier.

MRS. O'NEILL QUITS CLUB

Springfield, Ill., April 10 (AP)—Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, senior woman member of the State House of Representatives, has formally resigned her vice-presidency of the Illinois Women' Republican Club as a protest, she explained, of "the domination of Illinois Republican women by Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick." The club was active in the support of Mrs. McCormick's campaign for nomination and election.

Mrs. O'Neill wrote in her letter of resignation to Mrs. George B. Dean, president, that Mrs. McCormick's campaign expenditures "constituted a bar to representative government by eliminating candidates who have not a large means at their disposal."

In her first announcement of her intention to quit the vice-presidency Mrs. O'Neill said Mrs. McCormick's influence had prevented her (Mrs. O'Neill's) appointment to an important House committee.

THEATER CROWD IS SHOCKED BY 'SCAB' SLAYING

Chicago, April 10 (AP)—A fashionable after theater throng saw Harry Townsend of Milwaukee fatally stabbed in the lobby of the Hotel Stevens, known as the largest hostelry in the world.

Townsend's jugular vein was severed when Bert Rogers, a former employe of the Milwaukee foundry of which Townsend is superintendent, went at him with a knife. Townsend died early today.

Rogers, following the attack, elbowed his way through the crowd of men and women, many in evening attire, and to the street where he surrendered to a policeman. He said he had gone to the hotel to see Townsend about a job, and that Townsend had called him a "scab" and knocked him down.

"He was much larger than I," Rogers told police, "and I used the knife to defend myself."

Spirits Take Hand in British Election

London, April 10 (AP)—Witchcraft as a live political issue will enliven oratory of spell-binders in current parliamentary elections throughout Great Britain. 1879 Glenwoods 1929
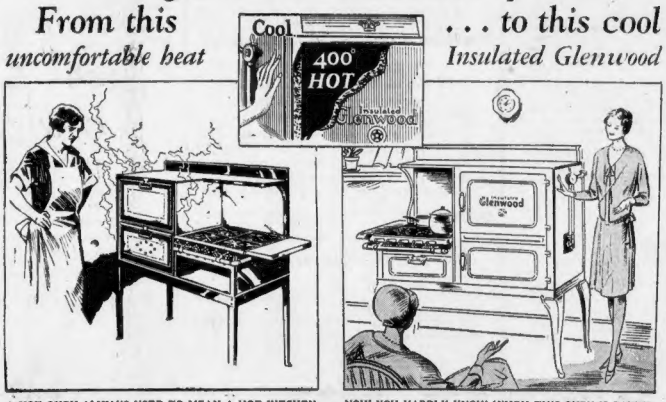
Fiftieth Anniversary
From this uncomfortable heat . . . to this cool Insulated Glenwood



A HOT OVEN ALWAYS USED TO MEAN A HOT KITCHEN
NOW YOU HARDLY KNOW WHEN THIS OVEN IS BAKING

THE old-fashioned range made the kitchen an uncomfortable place to spend the summer. It had to be hot or else nothing could be cooked.

Today, the thick walls of the Insulated Glenwood oven hold the heat inside so effectively that, three feet away, you can hardly tell when the oven is at its highest baking heat . . . Another advantage of this 1929 gas range is that much of the cooking that used to have to be done on the top burners can now be better done in the oven with its evenly regulated heat and its thorough ventilation to carry off cooking odors.

Remember also that the Glenwood AutomatiCook sets you free from hours of sitting in the kitchen and worrying about what you are cooking.

If your range hasn't these modern comforts, you certainly owe it to yourself to get someone at the office of your local gas company to tell you about the Insulated Glenwood.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE DEFENDED

Republican and Democratic members of the House today vigorously opposed a resolve calling for the creation of a special commission to study the workings of the compulsory automobile insurance law, at a hearing before the Senate Committee on Ways and Means.

Representative Renton Whidden of Brookline, Republican, and a dissenting member of the Committee on Insurance, the committee that originally recommended an investigation, sounded a warning on the danger of doing nothing to relieve the car owners from the high insurance rates this year.

He charged that not one of the 34 bills seeking to amend or abolish the present compulsory law was "open up" when the insurance committee sat in executive session.

DANCE WILL AID IRISH SOLDIER

A capacity gathering is expected to throng Deacon Hall, Washington st., tonight at a benefit dance for an Irish Republican soldier.

The young man in question is now in a private hospital suffering from an illness contracted while working for Irish independence, both in this country and abroad. He is a member of the County Kerry Association, Gaelic Athletic Association, Pere Marquette Council, Knights of Columbus, and formerly was a delegate to the Central Council of Irish County Associations. Music will be furnished by the Irish Pipers Orchestra.

B. & M. TO ISSUE BONDS, STOCK

In the shortest annual meeting held in several years, with President George Hannauer in the chair, stockholders of the Boston & Maine Railroad today in Kingsley Hall unanimously authorized a $2,200,000 equipment trust agreement, an issue of bonds to the amount of $2,400,000 to reimburse the treasury for improvements made and 75,000 shares of 7 per cent prior preference stock to provide for the conversion of bonds which were extended under the 1928 reorganization.

The equipment trust, it stated, will cover five heavy duty switch locomotives, four of the Boston & Maine's "super-power" freight locomotives, 500 steel hopper-type coal cars, 10 steel baggage and mail cars and seven locomotive cranes.

Court St. Ann Will Give Minstrel Show

Court St. Ann, Catholic Daughters of America, will present its annual minstrel show in Bloomfield Hall, Geneva ave., Neponset, on the evenings of April 29 and 30.

The cast has been rehearsing under the direction of George "Deckie" Thornton.

Miss Florence Doherty heads the committee on arrangements. Assisting her are Grand Regent Mrs. Francis J. Hickey; Vice-Grand Regent Mrs. Lucy Weafer; Mrs. Eva Weafer, Mrs. Mary Connolly, Kathryn Hosley, Katherine McGilvray, Mildred Glynn, Anna Reardon, Mary Shea and Mae McCarthy.

CONCORD LIGHT MAKING MONEY DESPITE LOSS

That the Concord municipal lighting plant had a highly successful year, despite losses due to loose bookkeeping methods, is revealed in its annual report for 1928 to the department of public utilities.

The net income for the year is shown to have been $43,323.19. Of this amount, $12,095.70 went for bond and note requirements and into the sinking fund. The balance $31,277.49, reduced the deficit carried over from previous years to $19,727.23.

The plant, it was shown, also has approximately $135,000 in its sinking fund to meet total indebtedness of $154,000, due at intervals up to 1940.

The soundness of the plant's financial status is further disclosed by the fact that on Feb. 1, the rate of 10 cents a kilowatt hour for lighting was made subject to a 10 per cent discount for cash within 15 days on bills rendered. This actually means a rate of 9 cents a kilowatt hour for those taking advantage of the discount.

The plant is one of the oldest municipal ventures of its kind in the State. It cost $348,607 in 1900. The book value is set at $174,700 due to the fact that the law requires 3 per cent to be written off each year.

Accused Cop Quits

Patrolman John R. Cullinan of the West Roxbury police station resigned from the police department while under charges.

Favor Half-Holiday for City Pumpers

A weekly half-holiday for engineers and firemen and other employes in pumping stations under control of the Metropolitan District Commission is provided for in a bill reported favorably today by the House Ways and Means Committee. The change would become operative December 3, 1929.

Clan-na-Gael to Hold Reunion on April 18

With modern, Gaelic and old-time dancing as features, the eighth annual reunion and dance of Clan Na Gael Reorganized will be held in Hibernian Building, Roxbury, Thursday evening, April 18th.

The demand for tickets has necessitated the engagement of four halls in the building. Interest is high, due to the fact that proceeds will be devoted to those now suffering as a result of Ireland's fight for freedom. Arrangements are in charge of John F. Sullivan, John Cotter, Daniel Shea, Patrick Lucy, Cornelius O'Brien, Catherine Enwright and Mary Donesin.

Chelsea Man Run Down by Girl's Auto

Run down while he was crossing Bellingham sq., Chelsea, today, John Steele, 56, of Broadway, Chelsea, was severely injured by the automobile operated by Miss June Maltzman of Franklin st., Chelsea. Steele landed on the curbing, suffering possible concussion of the brain, contusions and abrasions of the head, and a severe cut on the right leg.

OILS GET LEAD IN NEW YORK DEALINGS

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, April 10—Bulls in the oil stocks had much better success than in other sections of the market. In the American list was again the outstanding leader in this group, selling in good volume above 50. Investment and Blair also were conspicuous. Buying of the latter is attributed to Robert W. Stewart and his associates, who are reported to have joined Harry F. Sinclair in a new gigantic oil venture at the end of the current season.

Yellow Truck moved up spectacularly to above 45 in one of the spasmodic moves for which this stock is famous. A big future has been predicted for this company, which is controlled by General Motors. General Motors, Radio and other sensational leaders in the bull campaigns of other years, were on the down grade today, rallying moderately in the late trading.

Sales are for mid-month settlements drove the rate up 10 per cent, but funds flowed in freely and no further increase is expected today. Business reports were favorable, the Iron Age reporting March and first quarter production and consumption unfilled tonnage increased 266,000 tons.

Anaconda Copper moved up about 3 points to 144 and higher prices were quoted for Kennecott, American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco and Greens Canenea.

INHERITANCE OF TALENT IS NOTED

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

Talent is frequently handed down to the second generation, despite the popular belief to the contrary. It is demonstrated, for examples, in the cases of two big leaders of the present day. One is John Hays Hammond, the great mining engineer, whose son, John Hays Hammond, jr., has made himself most prominent through inventive genius. Another is Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, whose daughter, Miss Henrietta H. Swope, is first assistant in the study of the Milky Way variable stars at Harvard Observatory. Miss Swope has discovered 385 "new" stars.

President Seeley's first name is one of those it is hard for some people to "get right." It appears in print frequently as Gerald and somewhat less frequently as Girard.

Election of Frederick H. Ecker, as president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., disposes of the rumors about what [illegible] ga was likely to adopt as a retirement plan. The salary received by the head of this company, largest financial institution in the world, is $200,000, more than twice that of the President of the United States. It is by no means the largest salary paid to a corporation president.

A surprisingly large number of present day executives started their business careers at around 34 or 35 a week. Mr. Ecker was a mail clerk at $6 a week. This started for about a year, and the other 46 of his 47 business years have been spent with the company he now leads. This is unusual, for the vast majority of today's executives have changed from one line of business to another.

Capt. S. C. Hooper, director of naval communications, is conspicuously quoted as being doubtful about the prediction that vehicles will eventually be moved by radio. The prediction questioned was made recently by a leading automobile manufacturer. It was not exactly a new prediction, for this column at least three years ago examined prediction was published. The inventor, then known to be at work on the problem, perfected a radio energy application of such importance during the World War that it was taken over by the Government as too dangerous to become a matter of public knowledge. It was successfully applied on the European battle front. The inventor is a New England man.

Who of us is competent to say what genius will achieve in the future? "Experts" ridiculed the automobile and the radio, when both industries were in their early fancy.

There is no denying the fact that Federal Reserve authorities have got unduly slow in separating Wall and bond loan figures, originally suggested in this column. It is hailed as a fine suggestion, but Mr Ing has been accomplished. Already broker knows that the so-called "brokers' loans" are very largely on bonds and not altogether stocks. Since discrimination is being exercised in making loans on stocks is on New York Stock Exchange securities and what percentage on New York Curb and unlisted issues.

Worry is certain quarters as to whether the New York Curb would list Ford Motor of Canada, non-voting stock, has been ended. The when issued shares were admitted to trading. The Curb is said to have something in its numerous regulations which puts a ban on non-voting stock. If so, it is hard to be in a class with the "Blue Laws."

When Prof. W. Z. Ripley of Harvard, now unfortunately ill, was "going strong," he centered a bitter attack on non-voting shares, and for a time there was a dearth of them. A lot of non-voters, however, are entitled to very high ratings but Prof. Ripley's main contentions were given the approval of leaders like, for example, President E. H. H. Simmons, who has just been nominated to be his own successor at the head of the big Stock Exchange. Mr. Ford, by the way, never worries about Wall Street regulations. He makes his own, having found them good down through the rolling years.

Chicago Stock Exchange's latest proud boast is that it is the first to have its transactions carried by a press association directly into newspaper offices from the floor of the exchange. But of course it should be remembered that Boston Exchange transactions have been carried directly into the main newspaper offices there via tickers for many years. No financial editor sits at his desk without a "Boston ticker" as well as a New York within hand's reach.

Frederics Stailforth of Harris, Forbes & Co. has just returned from Europe. While overseas he conferred with French and German bankers. He declares the outlook is hopeful for successful settlements of reparations problem.

"The plans discussed up now seem to be well on the way to finding a solution of the reparation problem, although it cannot be denied that differences of opinion as yet have not been overcome and that it will need much imagination, skill to bring the conferences to a satisfactory conclusion," says Mr. Stailforth.

"It is of the greatest importance that the plan for the mechanics of reparation payments be sufficiently flexible to present adaptation to future economic developments. Post-war times will have shown to everybody that the prosperity of Europe depends upon the stable conditions of each and every individual European country."

• • •

Mr. Stailforth sees France as in prime, although it cannot be denied that differences of opinion as yet have not been overcome and that it will need much imagination, skill to bring the conferences to a satisfactory conclusion," says Mr. Stailforth.

ANOTHER SIX-DAY STORY

by CHARLES G. BOOTH

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

Gail Hollister, sent to Colonel Conniston, a collector and owner of the famous Conniston emeralds, to tabulate his treasures, sees Kerry O'Neil, a handkerchief over his face, holding up two men in a car. Later she meets Conniston, sees the jewels, and goes to bed. The men Kerry tried to hold up are Victor Gill and his father, diamond merchants, who sought to buy the emeralds for $300,000. Kerry had an interest in the gems and thinks the Gills have them. He is mistaken. Gail finds Conniston dead. Kerry appears. She knows he will be suspected. She persuades him to flee.

Detectives question Gail. Kerry hides on the beach. He confesses his love for Gail. They both think Conniston was slain by Stark, a nephew, whom both he housekeeper and Gail had seen in the moonlight near the house. Kerry in secret insists on coming to the house to investigate.

CHAPTER 3

THE inquest was held the following afternoon.

Gail hadn't the slightest doubt as to the verdict. It ran:

"We, the jury, find that Philip Conniston died of valvular lesion of the heart and that, in our opinion, his death was hastened by strangulation, apparently at the hands of Kerry O'Neil."

Gail, in the garden, heard a soft footfall. It was Dimity.

"What is it, Dimity? You've got something to tell me?"

He nodded. "Yes, Missie. But not here—people around. In the summer-house—at 10."

She could not rid herself of the impression that they had been watched.

Bartlett, Stark, and the Gills left at 8.

She would see Kerry in two hours. She must meet Kerry on the beach and if he still insisted on coming up to the house bring him by way of another trail she had found that morning. And while he was in the library she would keep Dimity in the summer-house.

Toward 6:30 she started to go out by way of the library window.

Her hand was upon the bolt when she stopped suddenly. There was a pool of moonlight upon the drive and athwart it lay the shadow of a tall lean man whose body was invisible.

Could it be Decker? The shadow suggested his lean figure, but Decker was on his way to Los Angeles—supposed to be.

Just then the shadow moved slowly on. It vanished. She hadn't been seen!

It was 9:30 now. Kerry might be on his way up to the house. He would run into the arms of whoever was out there. He must not.

Gail descended the path at the cliff.

Suddenly a figure came toward her. It was Kerry.

"Gail!" he whispered. His arms closed about her.

For a moment she clung to him, trembling. The thud of her heart against his alarmed him.

"What's wrong, Gail?"

"Decker!" she gasped. "He came back! He's after me. You must get away—he'll see you! Quick, Kerry!"

She broke off. There had come a soft football on the sand.

"Stick up your hands, O'Neil!" It was Decker.

His small eyes glinted maliciously.

"Well, O'Neil, I've got you!"

"So it seems," Kerry agreed. "What are you going to do with me?"

Decker laughed unpleasantly. His hand went to a pocket and Gail heard the clink of metal. The gun wavered a little. It happened suddenly, then. Kerry's palm struck the weapon from Decker's hand.

Suddenly the men closed. Gail closed her eyes. When she opened them Decker lay still. Kerry was stuffing a handkerchief into his mouth. The handcuffs which Decker had intended for Kerry the latter now clamped on his wrists. His legs Kerry secured with a belt. Decker had worn around his waist. A leap of fury in the man's eyes indicated his return to consciousness.

"Come on, Gail!" he said curtly. Seizing her by the hand he began to hurry her along the beach towards the trail.

"You are not going up there!" she gasped.

"I certainly am! I'll never have a better chance. Come on!"

Gail hadn't the remotest idea what Kerry was going to do now that he was in the library. A feeling of catastrophe took hold of her. Kerry looked at everything.

Gail wandered to the table and idly picked up the Venetian mirror. She caught the reflection in the mirror and stood it on its end, handle up.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Do you think that students of today are higher in ideals and scholastics than students of other generations, as stated by Dean Henry Grattan Doyle of Washington University?

PAUL J. SAIA, 160 O st., South Boston, supervisor—No. I don't agree with Mr Doyle in his statement. In past years when young men and women went to college they went to study and better themselves. Nine-tenths of the people going to college now go there either because they are forced to go by their families or because they can "step out" once they get away from home. They pick their college more from the success of its football team than from its scholastic rating.

ESTELLE DUNN, 31 Ward st., Boston, saleswoman—It is rather hard to give an opinion on a statement as broad as this, but as a whole I think that the student of yesterday was higher in ideals and scholastics than the student of today. I don't think that it is the modern student's fault but rather the environment which surrounds him. The present prohibition law has to a great extent aided in the degradation of the student of today. It is considered smart by the student to break this law.

WILLARD PROCTOR, 28 O st. South Boston, clerk—Most people think that students of today are much inferior to the students of other generations. People read of "wild parties," elopements, divorce cases, etc., and from some of our students have figured in and they immediately condemn the entire student body. I don't think that this is right. The students of other days had just as many "wild parties," etc., as the student of today, but we do not hear so much about them. All students should not be condemned because of a few who do not seem to care what they do.

MISS HELEN ALPERT, 38 Dana st., Revere, saleslgirl—I don't think there is much difference in ideals and scholastic standings between the student of today and those of other generations. As a whole. Of course, the colleges are much more crowded now than before and consequently the percentage of those who do not make good is much higher than in other generations. With the country filled with crime and vice of all sorts there is a much greater chance for our present day students to go "bad."

FORD LOSS $72,221,498 IN 1928

GIRL'S BODY IS ORDERED EXHUMED

Providence, April 10—The bod of Florence Sybrick, 25, was ordered by Atty.-Gen. Charles P. Sisson, exhumed today a few hours after burial, on suspicion of foul play.

A new autopsy will be performed and an inquest ordered if evidence of foul play is found, he said.

The girl's body was found on the railroad in Central Falls last Saturday, and this is the third time the investigation of her death has been reopened. Her death was first declared accidental. Later this was changed to suicide. Later still a theory of foul play was adopted only to be abandoned.

The attorney general's action is due to insistence of her father, Anthony Wybrick of West Cole st, Pawtucket, that his daughter was not depressed over the necessity of appearing in court for annulling. The father said his daughter had been informed she would be required to, she was a juvenile and was genuinely sorry for her wrong doing but not worried over it.

The foul play theory was precipitate abandoned after Chief Inspector Wilfred Wadsworth of Pawtucket conducted an inquiry on invitation of the Central Falls police and served with the medical examiner's report of suicide.

'Robbery' Story Costs Loser Another $10

The tablet were turned in municipal court today on Joseph Fortunato of the North End, who appeared as complainant against Joseph and Silvio Varra, charged with assault and battery and robbing him of $16. On the stand Fortunato admitted he lost his money in a dice game, whereupon Judge Dowd had him charged with gaming and fined him $10 after dismissing the charges against the Varra brothers, Fortunato paid.

K. of C. Officials to Meet in Montreal

Watches Trials

Bowie, Md., April 10—Edward Simms, whose colors are carried by the Xylang Farm horses was at Havre de Grace recently to watch the trials of the two-year-olds in the string.

DIVIDENDS BELIEVED MISSED

The Ford Motor Car Company surplus declined $72,221,498 during last year, as shown by the corporation's certificate of condition filed today with the Massachusetts commissioner of corporations and taxation.

This is believed to indicate a loss of that amount. If dividends were paid during the year to the three stockholders, Henry Ford, his wife and son, the loss is not so great, but it is considered doubtful that any dividends were paid.

The "profit and loss surplus" of the company, as stated on the certificate, amounted on December 31, 1928 to $[illegible]

The indicated loss of more than $72,000,000 compares with an indicated loss of $42,786,727 in 1927.

It is because of its vast holdings in corporations of plant that it is considered unlikely dividends were paid to the Ford's last year.

ASSETS NEAR 700 MILLIONS

Assets at the close of the year are listed as follows: Real estate, $156,239,206.72; machinery and equipment, furniture and fixtures, $152,921,365.82; merchandise, $102,778,704.85; notes and accounts receivable, cash, stocks, bonds and patent rights, [illegible],826,856,10[illegible]; deferred charges to operations, $5,048,415.15; total, $683,909,348.34.

Capital stock and liabilities: Capital stock, [illegible]; accounts payable, [illegible]; reserves, $5,114,[illegible]; surplus, [illegible]; loss surplus

TAUGHT PEOPLE LIQUOR MAKING, BOYAN SAYS

James F. Boyan, acting mayor of Albany, N. Y., when asked by the editors of the Hearst $25,000 Temperance Prize Contest for his opinion on Volstead, declared against the present prohibition laws. His views, which are coupled with those of other officeholders in the capitol district of New York State, follow:

By JAMES F. BOYAN

Prohibition is a failure and Mr. Hearst's $25,000 Temperance Contest, which seeks a satisfactory solution, is a worthy project. Enforcement is at a low ebb for, while the law has acted in a prohibitory manner for some, it has created a new type of drinker.

Prohibition has taught people how to make their own liquor. You are invited to a friend's home for the evening. He offers you a concoction which he thinks is better than the "old stuff." When he visits your home, you try to give him a still better home brew.

Prohibitionists decry the story that there is much drinking by the young people at dances. I have been in so-called prohibition territory and have learned that the same situation exists there except that it is a new phase. The men and women did not drink much before prohibition law.

The early campaign of education and the local option wars gradually making them temperate. The same is true elsewhere. The number of saloons and drinking places were gradually being cut down. The better class saloon would not serve a drunken man.

LEO M. DOODY, commissioner, Department of Charities, Albany, N. Y. — Following the recent Walsh murder in Albany, the Times-Union reported a talk with the 11-year-old son of one of the victims. The lad told the reporter that he had lived on a half loaf of bread for a day or two, and casually added that things would not have been so bad if the "Home Brew" were ready to drink. He said he liked the "sting" of it.

Here was an 11-year-old boy an acknowledged expert in the brewing of beer. How many experts of tender age are there today in beer brewing, wine making and alcohol distilling under the present prohibition laws?

FLAG WINNERS TO SEE WORLD WONDERS

The two boys and the two girls who are adjudged the national champions in the nationwide Patriotic Flag Contest, now being conducted by the United States Flag Association and who are to be awarded the three-months' trips around the world, will sail from San Francisco on Friday, June 28, it was announced today.

This fortunate quartet, properly outfitted for the trip and adequately chaperoned, will sail aboard the President Monroe, one of the palatial ocean liners which plies the Pacific, and there will be frequent excursions inland by rail.

The first stop will be Honolulu, which will be reached July 6, after one week's cruising. From there the party goes to Kobe, Japan. The next port of call will be Shanghai, China; then come Manila, Singapore and a rail trip through the Malay states.

And every boy and girl who is now competing in the contest has an equal chance to win this memorable trip. It is hoped that every one who has not completed his or her offering will do so within the next couple of days, as the final date for the submissions of the papers to the heads of the local contest units has been set as next Friday, April 12—not later than 12 o'clock noon.

Harvard Nine Meets Quantico Marines

POWERFUL CRIMSON TEAM PICKED TO WIN

Quantico, Va., April 10—A heavy hitting Harvard nine faces the Marines here today. The Crimson is picked to capture its third game in a row on the present invasion of the South.

Red McHale is the probable pitching choice in the game today. McHale has come along rapidly in the past few days and is fit to face the Marine club. The Marines are no soft assignment for the Harvard hurler, though.

The Marine lineup includes a flock of veteran ball players, and can give the Crimson tossers a flock of trouble.

The Harvard showing on the trip to date has been beyond the preseason hopes of the most enthusiastic Crimson fan. The infield to functioning perfectly, the gardeners have played heads up ball and the work of the batterymen has been better than expected.

TEAM LOOKED WEAK

Before the trek to the South began the Harvard team was somewhat of an uncertain quantity, as there was but one experienced pitcher, and the outfield seemed weak.

However, in the first game, and in the Tuesday fray, which Harvard took from the University of Richmond by an 8-to-2 count, the team looked great.

Harvard will be a tough foe for any of its opponents on the diamond this year.

Despite the intense heat, both Harvard and Richmond played good baseball from start to finish. Coach Mitchell called Dick Ketchum to pitch for Harvard and the right hander held Richmond to five hits, while he fanned five men.

Harvard scored two runs in the opening inning. Bassett walked, Nugent singled to left, McGrath singled to left scoring Bassett and Nugent scored when the throw to the plate got away from the catcher.

Richmond got two runs to tie the game in the second inning when Creath reached first on an infield hoot, but Sanford hit into a double play, Ketchum to McGrath to Prior.

Then Brown angled to right, Beale walked and Nugent lost a high fly to short right field, both runs scoring.

The Crimson added two more runs in the fifth. Sam Batchelder led off with a Texas leaguer to center. Ketchum fanned, Bassett walked and Nugent sacrificed. McGrath singled to left scoring Batchelder and Bassett.

HITS HOMER

Batchelder, Harvard's slugging catcher, opened the Harvard seventh with a slashing home run to deep left field and easily made the circuit before the ball was halfway back to the plate.

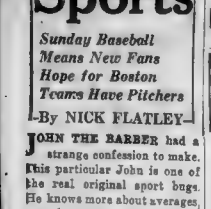
Ketchum grounded out to the pitcher. Bassett walked and Nugent hit a grounder to the shortstop, both men being safe when the play to second was made too late.

McGrath tripled to center, sending Bassett and Nugent home, and McGrath counted when Donaghy drilled one through the shortstop, making the score 8 to 2, the final reading.

Everett Donaghy, Harvard's captain and third sacker, made several fine stops and throws, one a one-handed stop of a line drive over third.

In the fifth inning a one-handed catch of second base by Frankie Nugent stopped an attempted rally on the part of Richmond.

The injured ankle that Johnny Prior received has left no bareness and after a few treatments by Trainer Fadden was as good as ever, Prior running around without trace of a limp.



Nick Flatley

"JOHN THE BARBER had a strange confession to make. This particular John is one of the real original sport bugs. He knows more about averages, records and scores than he does about shampoos, tonics and soaps. And he's a great barber, what we mean.

"You wouldn't believe it," chirped John, "but I ain't seen a ball game in three years. Laugh that one off. I have to work every day in the week, and the few holidays I had to spend with the family."

John, it might be mentioned, has four youngsters who have reached that age when they want to see the adjacent world.

"But this will be a big year," John continued, as he deftly removed a gob of lather from your correspondent's ear. "You have a new pass customer. I can go to see games on Sundays, and I warn you I won't miss one. The kids can still have the holidays, but the Sundays belong to me.

"That Sunday baseball is the greatest thing that has happened since I won the parlay that paid the limit."

John the Barber is just one of all throng who will storm our ball parks this summer. The magnates will be pleasantly surprised at his numerosity.

Eight amateurs will be crowned champs this evening. Eight opponents will also be crowned.

SOMEHOW or another, it is easy to gather the impression that this is going to be a large baseball year. The boys are all vitally interested in getting the low-down on how the teams looked down South. There is an unusual demand for Annie Oakleys.

And a trip around the stores where tickets are now on sale for the opening Sox-Braves games proves that cash customers are getting busy in large numbers. One Springfield delegation of 100 has reserved seats for the morning and afternoon games. Patriots' day, several Worcester flocks have sought blocks for the first Sunday pastime. Just a little real baseball and Bob Quinn and Judge Fuchs will be buying new bearings for the turnstiles.

Said turnstiles have rusted up quite a bit in the last few years, but a few good breaks this time will erase all the said memories.

The golfers have lost the Ryder Cup, but they'll probably pick up another without much trouble over in dear old England.

THERE is real hope for both Boston ball teams in the coming campaign. Don't forget that, no matter how many holes you can pick in the lineups just about now. Big league success depends primarily and ultimately on pitching. A team may boast ever so many fielding and swatting stars, but it will finish wallowing down the cellar ladders if its chucking doesn't hold up.

The Yanks last year collapsed after rolling up a big lead, because Herb Pennock went sour. The team finally pulled through for the reason that Pipgras and Waite Hoyt, when the pinch came, were able to go in there and win consistently.

Both Boston clubs have good pitching staffs. Bill Carrigan and Yorkwonders with Morris, Ruffing, Russell, Gaston and MacFayden. Bill would like a good southpaw, but lacking one, he still will get results.

The Braves have three left handers above the average—Brandt, Cooney and Jones. They have a star right hander in Bob Smith, and Delaney, Seibold, Cantwell, Greenfield and Cunningham will fill a lot of gaps.

Where there's pitching there's hope, regardless of the lively baseball.

Young Mister Heflin stole all the color away from Paulino's return to New York, after a trip to the tropics. The poor Basque hooya seems to get the worst of it.

IN these days when fans are vociferous in expressing disapproval, vociferous and persistent, many an innocent victim gets roasted to a fare-ye-well and has no recourse whatever. A case in point.

Up at the amateurs last evening, Joe Lillich, Holy Cross heavyweight, put up what the crowd thought was a winning fight against Clarence Dodge, flashy from the Coast. The announcer hopped into the ring at the finish. He took the slips from the judges, looked them over, and then gathered the vote of Joseph Jones, the referee. Then he pointed toward Doyle's corner. The cry of the wolves reverberated around the girders of the arena.

Referee Jones, who, incidentally, is a mighty good referee, was assaulted with all the verbal bombs in the world. He made his exit to the accompaniment of a chorus of catcalls and Bronnix cheers.

Yet Jones had voted for Lillich, while the two judges had decided the other way. But, as Stribling remarked when he lost the decision at Miami, what of it?

Eagles Face Fast Nines Next Week

By JOHN GILLOOLY

Dartmouth, Vermont, Fordham and Syracuse nines clash with B. C. next week.

These teams are worrying Coach Hugh Duffy to such an extent that he is making his baseball squad work overtime.

Boston College faces these four foes within five days, starting on next Tuesday afternoon with the Big Green nine. Vermont comes on Thursday with Fordham staging its annual Patriots' day invasion. Syracuse ends the first week of baseball at the Heights on Saturday.

With these prospects before him Duffy is centering his attention on his pitching staff and also trying to mend a few of the fielding faults that cropped in the South.

He hopes to sweep through the week's opponents without a defeat and chances are that he will provided the slab staff holds up.

Hughie McNulty will bear the brunt of the burden.

McNulty hasn't the physique to hurl very often. When he's given the assignments Hughie is one of the best college pitchers in the land.

Pete Herman and Jim O'Connor are growing better daily, and Charley Murphy, Jim Regan and Rosy Ryan, three of the boys who spent the Easter recess in Boston, are tossing them up with renewed interest.

Jim Donovan and John Dixon, although they didn't get a chance to drill on Shenyin the Southland, have their arms in trim and are ready to hurl their first games for the B. C. varsity.

If these boys come through Duffy will consider his team one of the best in the East. The Heights folk are concerned about the Holy Cross series for the Purple has a flock of pitchers who can't be bettered by any college team in the country, and many big league magnates would swap their hurling rosters for Jack Barry's mound staff.

DE VITO-PINTO MEET ON MAT

John Kilonis, one of the best rough-house grapplers that ever stepped into the ring, will make his return to Boston tomorrow night when he meets Charlie Metro, his old rival, in a preliminary to the Joe DeVito-Stanley Pinto feature bout at the Grand Opera House.

The addition of Kilonis and Metro to an already strong card makes the wrestling offering at the Grand Opera House one of the most attractive in many weeks.

DeVito and Pinto, main bout stars, are outstanding favorites here.

Two of the younger set of wrestlers, they have swept through all opposition in their Boston showings, and since both of them are aiming for a shot at Gustave Sonnenberg the champion of the world, their battle is certain to be a brilliant one.

DeVito has been installed a 10 to 9 favorite over the Bohemian champion. Both of them are clever, fast and strong.

But DeVito, the younger of the pair, is regarded as about the best prospect today.

Stan Zbyszko, grand old man of the mat, will meet Ned McGuire, and Dan Koloff will meet Jack Rodgers in the preliminaries.

Training Camp Notes

Houston, Tex., April 10 (AP)—Joe McCarthy's Cub machine, hitting on all cylinders, moves northward tonight after the most successful spring exhibition season in years.

The Cubs defeated Houston 5 to 2, running their season exhibition record to 21 victories out of 26 games. Hack Wilson made a homer and a single.

Philadelphia, April 10 (AP)—Al Simmons, leading batsman, with the Athletics, has rheumatism of the ankles and is definitely out of the game for at least two weeks, probably longer, Summa will play in the outfield during Simmons' absence. Joe Bolay, regular shortstop, is rid of his sore arm and will be ready for opening day.

Manager Shotton of the Phillies said there was no truth to the report that Catcher Spud Davis would be traded to the Boston Braves for Shortstop Eddie Farrell.

Indianapolis, April 10 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds were in Indianapolis today, trying to get out of the rain which for two days balked their efforts to play the Louisville Colonels a pair of exhibition matches.

New Orleans, La., April 10 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians break camp tomorrow and head northward. Wet grounds spoiled the last game with the New Orleans Pelicans.

Shreveport, La., April 10 (AP)—The Tigers were to make their final attempt to win a baseball game from the Pittsburgh Pirates today before entraining for Detroit. The Pirates handed Detroit another trimming yesterday, falling upon Prudhomme and Barnes for a 10 to 6 victory.

Augusta, Ga., April 10 (AP)—Walter Johnson and his Senators from Washington gave the New York Giants another sound thrashing, 7 to 3. They battered Fred Fitzsimmons for six runs in the second inning.

Little Rock, Ark., April 10 (AP)—After clawing their way through most of the spring training campaign, the world's champion New York Yankees selected Little Rock for their first real demonstration of first-class baseball. Against the Little Rock Travelers the Yankees played a dashing game in the field and got some excellent pitching from Gordon Rhodes and George Pipgras to boot. The Yankee batters found Woolfolk, a left-hander, quite a puzzle, but eventually they got to him for a 3 to 2 victory. Babe Ruth got one hit, a double, on which he subsequently scored the first Yankee run on another double by Gehrig.

Shreveport, La., April 10 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates were jubilant over the showing of their two bespectacled hurlers, Carman Hill and Lee Meadows, against the Detroit Tigers.

Memphis, Tenn., April 10 (AP)—Johnny Watwood, rookie outfielder, obtained from Shreveport of the Texas League, has been hitting so boisterously this spring that he seems certain of a regular job with the White Sox.

York handed over their slips giving the verdict to Doyle. The 6500 fans booed and the larger part of the yelling was directed at Referee Joseph Jones of New York, who voted for Lillich.

TWO BOSTON BOYS IN ARENA WARS TONIGHT

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Six New England boxers are still in the running as the boys from all sections of the United States compete in the finals of the national boxing championships which wind up at the Boston Arena here tonight.

Those representing New England are Albion Holden of Providence, R. I., in the 118-pound class; Dick Collins, Boston, in the 135-pound division; Leslie Baker, Watertown, welterweight; Ray Lopez, Boston, in the 160-pound division; Harry Allen of Brockton, light-heavyweight, and Nick Debellis, of Boston in the 147-pound class.

Debellis defeated Richard Tucker of Baltimore in the final bout of the second night to win his way into the final night of the New England. This gives Greater Boston two boys in the semifinal bracket.

Harry Allen of Brockton proved the hit of the show when he knocked out Arthur Mayer of Portland, Oregon, in the first round of their contest. Allen flattened his opponent with a right lancer to the jaw.

GOLDEN WINS

In the 118-pound class Albion Holden of Providence, R. I., got a three-round verdict over John Feis of Baltimore. It was a fast fight with the Rhode Island Red getting the edge.

Dick Collins of Kelley and Hayes gym kept New England in the running by defeating Frank Hughes of Chicago. This battle was one of the closest of the evening and it could have gone either way.

Another knockout came when Ray Lopez of Boston knocked out Cecil Lee of Mobile, Alabama, in one round. Lopez started to work from the gong and sent more leather at Lee than the Mobile boy was ready for.

Leslie Baker showed his superior skill when he knocked out Freddie Beade of Norwich, Ct., in two rounds. Baker is a likely looking youngster and should show to good advantage tonight.

LILLICH LOSES

A bad verdict was handed out in the boxing bouts when Joe Lillich of Holy Cross College, Worcester, lost a decision to Clarence Doyle of Los Angeles, Cal.

Lillich, who seemingly won all three rounds, outhitting the Olympic Club master and giving him a boxing lesson, lost the decision and a possible national championship. Judges John Taylor of Pittsburgh and Charles L. Diehan of New

Braves Start Trek to Worcester

Norfolk, Va., April 10—Rabbit Maranville, Al Spohrer, Bunny Hearn, Joe Dugan, Dick Smith and Fred Maguire left here following the game with New Haven. The six were headed for Worcester, where the Tribe plays Holy Cross College on Friday.

One of the most encouraging events of the barnstorming trip was the performance of Hank Gowdy, veteran catcher, in the Tuesday game here. He caught Joe Brandt, and worked that capable hurler so well that Brandt fanned 15 men.

Hank was just as good at the bat as ever. He annexed a couple of very good base hits, and his rifle arm prevented the New Haven players from doing any stealing.

Pioneer Track Team in Meet on April 20

B. U. track team will open its outdoor season at Wesleyan, Saturday, April 20, it was announced at B. U. The team will be represented in the Class C division of the Penn Relay Carnival at Philadelphia, April 26 and 27.

FINLAY FACES KNIGHT TODAY

Pinehurst, N. C., April 10 (AP)—The first round of match play in the North and South amateur golf tournament was under way today with 16 survivors of qualifying play moving their luck for the title now held by George Voigt.

John Dawson of Chicago took medalist honors with a card of 73 for the last 18 holes and a total of 143 for the two rounds of qualifying competition.

Voigt, the metropolitan district star, also had a 73, but finished second for the two days' play with 73—71—144. Ross Somerville, Canadian champion, was third with 74—76—147, while Eddie Held of New York and Eugene Homans of Englewood, N. J., has 148 each.

Phillips Finlay, who showed the way to the field with 70 Monday, took 80.

Today Finlay, the Harvard sophomore, was paired against J. S. Knight of Akron, O.; Dawson against T. S. Tailer of Freeport, L. I., and Voigt against R. H. Swoope of Philadelphia.

Gardner Sets Pace in Derby

Uniontown, Pa., April 10 (AP)—With the toughest grind of the route behind them until they cross the desert, C. C. Pyle's plodding Pilgrims hung doggedly to Waynesburg, 33 miles distant on the 11th leg of their 3400 mile trek. The runners have covered 437 miles.

They traveled 63 miles from Cumberland, Md., to Uniontown, climbing to height of 2500 feet in surmounting the peaks of the Alleghenies. The long hills forced Nels Neilson, Chicago, out of the race.

Ed Gardner, sturdy Seattle negro star, continued to show the way in elapsed time. He tops Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., policeman, by one hour, 13 minutes and 17 seconds. Salo holds an advantage of 1:33.19 over Peter Gavuzzi, England, who is in third place.

Billy Petrolle Stops Norman Brown

Crusader Baseball Squad Back Home

Worcester, April 10—With seven victories to its credit, the Holy Cross varsity baseball team returned from its southern trip with all the members in fair shape.

Coach Barry expressed himself as pleased with the showing of the team during the stay in the South.

Flitor Cahill, who was to fill the shortstop berth this season, is still on the hospital list and will not be ready for action when the Crusaders meet the Braves, here Friday.

Cahill has a bad heel. It became infected a few days before the squad left for the South The wound healed too rapidly and while in Richmond surgeons opened it again.

Capt. Harrell came home with the assistance of a cane owing to a spiking he received in the game with Quantico Marines.

One for Homer

Portland, Me., April 10—Homer Robertson, Boston negro, nosed out a decision over Babe McCorgary, Oklahoma cowboy, here, in a 12-round feature McCorgary rallied toward the end, but Robertson had run up plenty of points early in the fray to hold the edge.

In the Tuesday go with Reading in Richmond, Ruffing and Gaston fanned excellently and held the Reading batters in check, while the Sox hitters were pasting the ball for 17 safe hits.

Schoolboy Baseball Opening Is Postponed by Snow

4 GAMES CANCELLED BY POOR WEATHER

By DICK McSWEENEY

A strange twist of New England weather, accompanied by snow, cancelled the four schoolboy baseball games scheduled for today.

Cambridge Latin was to have played at Groton, Jamaica Plain was billed to meet Brookline, Reading was to journey to Swampscott and Boston Trade was to visit Middlesex school nine.

These postponements will work a hardship on the schoolboy teams, since two of the outfits listed to play today, Brookline and Swampscott, will meet diamond opponents on Friday without the experience which would have come with today's tussles.

The Newton baseball schedule reads: April 15, at Lawrence; 17, Woburn; 19, Cambridge Latin; 24, at Everett; 27, at Medford; May 3, B. C. High; 4, Brookline; 8, Rindge; 11, at Somerville; 15, Malden; 18, at Cambridge Latin; 22, at Everett; 25, at Waltham; 29, at Brookline; June 1, at Pingree; 5, at Somerville; 8, Boston English.

All Newton's home games will be played either at Victory Field or West Newton Playground, due to the fact that work on the new high school diamond is still unfinished.

George L. Ward, faculty manager of athletics at Waltham high school, announces the Watch City nine's baseball schedule. Six of the 18 games on the card are away from home. Here's the data: April 13, Concord; 17, Middlesex at Concord; 19, Norwood; 24, at Arlington; 26, Somerville; May 3, at Belmont; 10, Revere; 14, Brighton; 18, at Norwood; 22, at Concord; 23, Newton; 29, School of Practical Art; June 1, Lynn Classical; 5, at Natick.

Tom Scanlon, Brighton high baseball mentor, had an interesting moment to make baseball recently. In an interview at Roger Park, Brighton, Tom said: "From time to time one reads that baseball is losing its grip on American boyhood.

"Various writers say that the national pastime is slowly but surely becoming unpopular among the schoolboy athletes.

hold that baseball is still THE national game, and I think that a glance around this practice field will prove my argument."

A glance around this practice field" revealed a squad of about 60 or 70 boys working out in a snappy manner, and none of them displayed by their actions that baseball was other than popular with them. Tom must be right.

Work on the new Memorial Stadium bleachers in the Fens is progressing rapidly. The turf on the playing field also looks to be coming along well. When work is completed on this project, Boston will have one of the finest athletic plants in the state.

Gloom struck the Newton high baseball team recently when it was announced that Phil Andrea, promising catching candidate, had strained several vertebrae in his spine. Andrea' physician, however, has stated that his patient was fully recovered and would be able to get into action soon.

Newton has quite a tennis schedule, with 32 dates on the list and all of them filled. They are like this: April 29, at Malden; May 3, at Everett; 8, Cambridge Latin; 9, Lynn; 13, at Brookline; 15, at Andover; 23, at Milton; 25, Interscholastic matches at Longwood; 27, Quincy; 30, Harvard interscholastics; June 3, at Somerville; 5, at Groton.

Coach Tom Scanlon of Brighton has plenty of confidence in his ability to find a star left-hand twirler. Justin McLaughlin, to puzzle enemy batters. Justin is a husky youth who has plenty of stuff. Looks as if he was ready to hurl for a full nine innings any one of these days.

Paulino Uzcudun is shown in this International Newsreel photo as he arrived in the U. S. on an attempt to win the heavyweight crown. The Bounding Basque has a lot of ring ability. He may be champ yet.

Farrell Is Sure U. S. Will Keep Ryder Cup

By JOHNNY FARRELL
American Open Golf Champion.

AMERICA'S golfing expeditionary forces will soon be on the high seas, Europe-bound, seeking new laurels for the cradle-land of the royal and ancient pastime of pitching and putting.

The good ship Mauretania is to bear us out of New York today with hopes flying high.

Everyone of the ten members of the Ryder Cup squad is personally ambitious and wondering, no doubt, what the immediate future holds in store for us. Collectively, the objective is the Ryder Cup, the international professional tropoy that Sam Ryder, one of the true lovers of a noble sport, placed in competition some years ago to determine the hi-yearly supremacy of American-British golf.

The boys naturally are keen to retain the silver bauble they won so decisively at Worcester two years ago. I do not doubt in the least, that we will bring it back with us

INDIVIDUALLY, however, the ambitions of the boys center on the British open championship, the classic of golf that is so strongly bulwarked with tradition. There is glory and gold to be had in the winning of this ancient tournament. Everyone of us perhaps visualizes himself, at the end of two days of stormy strife, being acclaimed by the multitudes at Muirfield.

Who will win? I cannot say and neither can anyone else. Some of the boys think Horton Smith, with the imperturbable air of his will cop the victory.

There is something so cool and complacent about this tall, likable lad from Joplin, Missouri, that one is made to respect him deeply. He's a great guy, if you ask me, and great in more ways than one. His golf is a game of fine precision, unhurried and of vast power, but it is his masterful fact acceptance of every situation that has us all stumped.

Duncan Fails To Qualify

London, April 10 (AP)—George Duncan, captain of the British Ryder Cup golf team, today failed to qualify for match play in the Roehampton tournament. The best the veteran professional, a former British open champion, could do, was a 74 and an 80 for a 36-hole 154.

Korloff to Meet "Sonny" at Hanover

Korloff is a very aggressive wrestler and it took the former world c hampion, Strangler Lewis, three hours to subdue him.

He should afford Gus plenty of opposition and Dartmouth College should witness a very colorful entertainment.

Sonnenberg was a star tackle on the 1919 and 1920 Dartmouth football elevens and was awarded his letter both years.

HUB TEAM PLAYS N. Y. FIVE FOR EARHART CUP

Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman transatlantic flier, has donated a beautiful silver cup to be awarded to the winner of the basketball game between the Mystery Club of the Denison House of Boston and the Whirlwinds of the Greenwich House of New York, which will be played at the Tyler st. gymnasium Saturday evening.

Miss Earhart was formerly a social service worker at the Denison House.

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

IT was near the end of the afternoon. The sun now and then pushed its rays through a spotty sky in the West. Below in the streets the horns on taxicabs and pleasure cars screeched as their drivers headed for the suburbs of the city.

The city seems to lose some of its attractiveness as the shades of evening arrive. People want to get home.

Mr. Boston is not any exception. He was busy putting his desk in order when one of the boys who has a chance of winning a national amateur boxing title dropped around to talk to him.

"I hope to keep winning until I become a champion as famous as Jack Dempsey was," confided the youth.

"The ring game is filled with heartaches," advised Mr. Boston. "Your future as a boxer looks promising, but maybe you would do even better in some other line. Try and get all you can out of life, my boy, for the curtain in the final act drops only too soon."

"But I want to become a champion," pleaded the boy.

"If that's your ambition, I wish you success, but don't stay in the game too long," went on Mr. Boston. "Sometimes the price of success is very great."

THE door to the sports department opened slowly. A huge figure stood there for a few seconds in the doorway, then moved slowly over to Mr. Boston.

The approaching form was that of a young giant 6 feet tall and more than 200 pounds in weight. In the twilight, Mr. Boston didn't recognize the approaching person. He noted that he wore eye glasses and that he appeared to be picking his way forward as though uncertain of something.

"Perhaps he does not wish to interrupt my conversation with this amateur boxer," thought Mr. Boston.

In another instant the figure stood beside Mr. Boston's desk. He didn't speak. Just stood there. Mr. Boston took a quick look at his visitor. As he did tears streamed down the young giant's face, then he sobbed outright.

Below in the street the horns on the taxicabs and other cars seemed to screech louder as they revealed the impatience of the different drivers.

"Speed, thrills, amusement is what the public craves," thought Mr. Boston as he turned away from the sobbing giant to suppress his own emotions and looked down on the whirling traffic.

By this time the electric signs and lights of the city were ablaze. They all seemed so full of life.

WHEN Mr. Boston turned back to his desk, the giant had gained control of his feelings. Mr. Boston swallowed hard and gripped the visitor by the hand.

"Rocky, I'm very pleased to see you again," said the veteran. "It has been some time since I have seen you box."

"You'll never see me box again," replied Rocky, none other than Rocky Stone of Roxbury. "The sight of my right eye is gone."

The heavyweight who has amused thousands by his antics in the ring once more gave in to his feelings

"The doctors tell me an operation may restore the sight of my right eye," said the famous ring comedian. "I am willing to risk my chances on the operation as I do not care to put any extra strain on my left eye."

THE amateur boxer listened with great interest to the conversation.

"Have you any money, Rocky?" queried Mr. Boston easily.

"I am living on the generosity of my friends," said Rocky. "I never received much money when boxing. My price was usually $150. And when I boxed at smokers I didn't ask any compensation. I was always willing to help a worthy cause."

A few minutes more and Rocky was gone with Mr. Boston's promise to help him in his fight to regain his lost sight.

"I guess you were right after all," said the amateur as he shook the veteran by the hand and hurried in the direction of the Arena. "It is a great racket, but one should not stay at it too long."

The boy stopped in his tracks, pushed his hand into his pocket and pulled out a dirty dollar bill.

"This is all I've got," he said. "But I want you to start a fund for Rocky Stone with it."

Sox Sunday Game to Start at 2:30

President Bob Quinn has decided to start all Red Sox Sunday games at 2:30 o'clock. The Fenway "jockey" reached his decision after questioning hundreds of fans on the matter. The big majority of those he talked with were in favor of the 2.30 start, he said.

Dundee Says He Will Kayo Mello in Garden Bout

CHAMPION FIT FOR BATTLE

Engages in Spirited Workout at Cardio's Gym; Mello Also Confident

By JACK CONWAY

"WHEN the gong sounds for the opening of the first round, I'm going to step from my corner and pin a haymaker on Al Mallo's chin. You may paste this one in your new spring lid."

Joe Dundee, world's welterweight champion, then got down to the serious business of putting the finishing touches on to his training in a workout at Charley Cardoa Gym on Hanover st.

Jack Conway

The champion worked out with Harry Foley, who tosses a his punches from the port side a la Mello. When Dundee called it a day, he supplemented his statement with the following remarks:

"I don't do a great deal of broadcasting about what I'm going to do to the opposition, but I feel I can lick Mello. He happened to get the jump on me in our last bout, but once I got underway I gave him better than he sent.

"I feel I shall win decisively this time. I shall then be ready to go through with my contract with the Boston Garden to meet the best available opponent in a championship match at Braves Field in June. Mello, McLarnin, Fields and Thompson have been mentioned as possible opponents for the June date. Any of those birds are okay as far as I am concerned."

Dundee displayed plenty of speed and sparkle in his training and showed no ill effects from his recent operation for an infected arm.

MEANWHILE Mello went through a lively workout at Jim Toland's gym.

"I licked Dundee when we met in January and I'll do it again on Friday night," said Al. "He then won't be able to deny me the title shot in June."

Arthur Flynn, who will carry the Dan Carroll colors into action, reports he is in good condition for his 10-round whirl with Charley Arthurs of Newark. Arthurs has walloped Jack McVey and is said to be the real goods.

Buster Brown of Baltimore will toss blows at Frankie Moore of the North End in an eight-round event.

In the six-rounders, Eddie Foster of New Rochelle will tackle Joe Taverieri of the North End; Joe Hatfield, Philadelphia, takes on Sam Chernoff of New York, while Tommy Daly of Lynn opposes Tony Sbucco of the North End.

SAMMY FULLER and Jake Zeramby have virtually agreed on terms for a New England featherweight championship bout, which will be staged by the Arena Club within a few weeks. Zeramby has come to the front with rapid strides and should give the heavy hitting Fuller some real opposition.

K. O. CHRISTNER refused an offer of $5000 to battle Joe Monte of Brockton in this city. Apparently the king of the Akron tire pits had been tipped that Monte was traveling on high right now.

JIM MALONEY has resumed training for bouts with Con O'Kelly, Jack Gagnon and Johnny Risko. Shamus intends to keep active in the ring for the rest of the year.

New Harvard Squash Court Plan Changed

A change in the plans of the new million-dollar gymnasium at Harvard was announced by William J. Bingham, director of Harvard athletics.

The squash courts, which were originally planned for location in the new structure, will have to be abandoned as considerable additional digging of an expensive nature would have to be done.

Field Hockey Games Set for Next Winter

Philadelphia, April 10—The United States Field Hockey Association, at a meeting here, accepted an invitation to send the 1929 All-America team to Los Angeles to play a series of matches next winter.

The committee also announced that the All-America selections would be made at the regular fall meeting in Boston during November.

An invitation was sent to the English authorities requesting that a team of former school girls from that country tour the United States in 1930. The Mid-West intercity tournament will be held at North Shore, Ill., next year. It was announced Miss Anne Townsend, president; Mrs. Edward Kumbhaar, Miss Cynthia Wesson of Boston and Miss Susanne Cross were in charge of the meeting

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Accompanied by Miss Marion Hollis, Miss Marion Turpie, Leo Diegel and George von Elm, the Ryder Cup team sailed today for England, where they are scheduled to defend that famous trophy.

The fact that the Ryder Cup could not be found before the team sailed should be of little concern, for there is but little likelihood of the Americans being defeated.

Capt. Walter Hagen has surrounded himself with a strong aggregation of homebreds, among whom are some of the world's finest golfers. Hagen expressed himself as confident that the wearers of the stars and stripes will again prove their superiority over the British Horton Smith will be one of the biggest attractions among the Americans, Smith came into prominence this winter and through his success has taken his place among the topnotchers of this country. He has been having trouble scoring as well as he did in the South since he has been using hickory shafted wooden clubs but he will soon get the feel of the new weapons.

Johnny Farrell will play in his first British open next month. Johnny was in England before for the British classic but an infected thumb forced him to withdraw his entry.

Farrell, who is the United States open champion, has not been going as well as usual since he won his title but he is a safe bet to be on the winning end of both of his Ryder Cup matches and also to finish in the money at Muirfield.

The Marlboro Country Club will hold its opening banquet at the Black and White Inn next Thursday night, after which the season will be declared to be officially open. Marlboro is playing regular greens and is making a drive for new members, which due to the fact that the out-of-town memberships are but $35, is meeting with great success. Marlboro is one of the best nine-hole layouts in the State, as well as one of the hardest tests of golf in any vicinity.

The Metropolitan Four-Ball League meeting was put over for one week. It was thought advisable to talk over more fully the proposed change from four ball to match play before making such a radical change

A few years ago the Wellesley Country Club was more or less of a cow pasture, but today it is a real golf course. Every hole has been renovated at great expense and as soon as the new fifth green is completed Wellesley will be duly proud of its course. The new fifth and sixth holes are costing the Wellesley Country Club approximately $17,000.

Judging from his two rounds last Sunday, Bill Blaney, the New England amateur champion, is ready for a big season. Bill stepped around Brae Burn last Sunday morning in 71 and came back with a 72 in the p m

The candidates for the Red Cross golf team will practice at the new Wachusett Country Club, instead of at the Worcester Country Club as has been the custom in recent years. The Worcester members did not take kindly to the Crusaders using their course but they will be heartily welcomed at Wachusett.

FUTURE BABE RUTHS AND TY COBBS--ATTENTION!

Beginning next Monday, the columns of the Boston Evening American's sporting pages will be open, free of charge, to any and all challenges any sandlot nine in New England may care to make.

A list of games wanted will be printed every Monday, and on other days, too, if the demand warrants.

Address all challenges to Games Wanted Editor, Sports Department, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Also send in a brief story of your team and pictures of players, if you wish, and these will be used from time to time.

This invitation, of course, applies to semipro clubs as well.

RYDER CUP TEAM SAILS TODAY; CUP MISSING

New York, April 10—Walter Hagen is searching for the Ryder Cup to take to England when it sails tonight.

Leo Diegel, one of the members of the 1927 Ryder Cup team, was the last known possessor of the Ryder Cup, which was supposed to have spent two and a half months with each member of the team.

Since Diegel sent it somewhere several months ago it hasn't been heard of

It is up to Capt. Hagan to bear it back for the competition at Moortown on the 26th and 27th of this month.

The two new members of the team, Horton Smith and Ed Dudley, making their first trip to England, are the most unruffled of the squad.

One of the distinguishing marks of the uniform blue flannel suits which the members of the United States Ryder Cup team will wear in the matches with the British golf professionals at Moortown, Leeds, April 26 and 27, will be a red, white and blue shield, bearing the letters R. C. T. The shields will be sewed on the coats

Montreal to Face Taylor Tonight

Providence, April 10 (AP)—Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., battles Young Montreal of Providence in the main bout here tonight. Montreal will attempt to avenge a technical knockout which Taylor scored over him three days ago on the Pacific coast. This was the only time in Montreal's career that he was stopped.

Ernie Mandell of Providence and Frankie Garcia of Utica, N. Y., brother of Bushy Graham, also will stage a 10-round match

Other bouts scheduled are Tommy Smooth, Boston, vs. Johnny Jaspar, Lansing, Mich., eight rounds; Al Koziol, Cranston, R. I., vs. Joey Conley, Boston, six rounds.

TEMPLE TRACK TEAM DEPENDS ON ONE MAN

Philadelphia, Pa., April 10—The success of the Temple University track team during the coming season will depend upon the performance of one man, Jack Tinkler.

The above-mentioned statement does not mean that the Owls will be represented by a "one-man" track aggregation, but the difference between victory and defeat in dual meets will depend upon this one individual.

Tinkler, a former Germantown high school all-around athlete, is being depended upon to give Temple its most successful season in the history of the sport at Temple.

The Owls had a great campaign last spring, winning five out of six dual contests, but Ben Oglesby, recently appointed track mentor, is certain that his charges will come through with a victory in every meet—provided Tinkler comes up to expectations.

For the past two seasons the former Germantown high ace has been the individual high scorer of the Owl cinder path aggregation. Competing in five dual events during the 1927 season, Tinkler amassed 70½ points, while last year in one more contest he rolled up 80 markers.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

IT is extremely unwise to neglect a cough. If ordinary remedies fail, it is always best to consult a physician for a chest examination to see whether the inflammation is spreading. Why court the possibilities of lung trouble?

Martha Lee Tells of Peach Recipes

DID you ever realize that being called a "peach" means the superlative in looks, in manner, or in niceness, or whatever state of being the speaker happens to be apostrophizing?

So why should not the fruit the expression immortalizes be often used in our homes? A fresh, luscious peach! Is there anything more acceptable? Or a golden canned peach, ice cold from the refrigerator, served with its rich syrup?

Martha Lee

A canned peach half stuffed with chopped nuts and dates and topped with whipped cream makes a party dessert. A canned peach half also may be put in a pastry case of plain or puff paste, with a spoonful of peach hard sauce and a maraschino cherry on top. Floating island becomes an entirely new dessert if an "island" is put on top of a peach half and the custard is poured around the peach.

An inverted peach half on a slice of pineapple is the basis for a fine salad. Pickled peaches may be made by cooking canned peach halves slowly in spiced sweet vinegar. When roasting a fowl or other meat, place either canned or fresh peach halves in the pan a few minutes before serving.

Arrange the peaches, cut side up, around the meat as a border and fill the hole in the peaches with currant jelly mixed with chopped blanched almonds.

Recipes for some of the more decorative peach desserts and salads are:

PEACH PASTRIES

Cut plain or sponge cake in squares and split so each layer is not over ½ inch thick. Put 2 layers together with any kind of icing, jelly or jam, as desired. Cook canned peach halves in a thick syrup made of ½ c. peach syrup and 1-3 c. sugar, basting often as they cool, to glaze the fruit. When cool, place peach on each piece of cake and pipe around the edges and sides with whipped cream.

PEACH MERINGUES

Cut stale sponge cake in rounds with the cooky cutter. Slightly moisten each round with maraschino cherry juice. Put half a peach, cut side up, on each piece of cake and fill cavities with halved maraschino cherries. Make a meringue, using 3 tbsps. confectioner's sugar for each egg white, and pile thickly over the peaches. Bake in a very slow oven until meringue is done. The oven should be about 300° F., and it should take about 15 minutes for the baking.

PEACH RICE PUDDING

Boil ½ c. rice 30 minutes in plenty of salted water. Dash with cold water and drain. Add ½ c. milk, ¼ c. sugar, 1 tbsp. butter, 1 tbsp. lemon juice and 1 beaten egg. Put in a buttered baking dish and cover top closely with well-drained halved peaches. Fill cavities and spaces between peaches with raisins and sprinkle confectioner's sugar thickly over all. Brown quickly in hot oven or under broiler flame. Serve cold with plain cream.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Curves or Angles

By MARIA JERITZA

ANITA LOOS, gifted author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," expreaced her views in an interview granted a short time ago on the subject: "What Gentlemen Don't Prefer."

According to Miss Loos, gentlemen do not prefer the woman who dedicates her life to keeping thin. In their eyes, curves are more alluring than angles.

Miss Loos contends that when a woman gives up her curves, she gives up, also, certain feminine qualities that men find charming and lovable in women, and becomes in too many instances "a sexless dynamo of nervous energy."

Be that as it may, the fact is undeniable that fashion is gradually leading us away from the angular boyish figure to one of sturdy yet symmetrical feminine curves.

The ultra-modern woman frankly likes to eat. She enjoys good food. And the wholesome, delicously cooked fresh vegetables, the fruits, salads and dainty desserts she partakes of put color into her cheeks far more beautiful than any she could put on them from a rouge compact or stick. This modern girl does not weigh the scales down too heavily, for she exercises. Swimming, horseback riding, golfing, hiking, dancing prevent the superfluous pounds from piling up despite her hearty appetite and her deep, dreamless eight hours of sleep nightly. How infinitely more soothing and entertaining such a woman is as a companion than the egotistical creature whose one topic of conversation is the number of calories she is ordering with her dinner of string beans and lettuce and who expects her companion to be as thrilled as herself over the ounce and a half she lost last week.

Do not congratulate yourself if you are underweight, but, on the contrary, begin to build up your nerves and strength and beauty by means of simple, healthful rules of living. To take on needed pounds you will require exercise only a little less strenuous than that indulged in by your too stout sister, for the reason that exercise establishes active circulation of blood throughout the body, and good circulation in turn strengthens the internal and external muscles.

Drink at least six glasses of water daily to keep your system clear of impurities. Orange or grapefruit juice daily is also advisable.

Preserved figs and cream, or stewed prunes and cream, with bananas and cream now and then for variety, makes an excellent breakfast dish for you. Each night before retiring I suggest that you drink a cup of hot chocolate.

Kinds of Anemia

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

THERE are many varieties of anemia and each must be treated in a different way.

Anemia means not only that the blood is "thin," that is, deficient in the red blood corpuscles. Anemia may mean a lessening of the red coloring matter of the blood, to be found in the red blood corpuscles—the hemoglobin. Locally, anemia may mean a reduction of the amount of the blood as a whole, quantitatively speaking, as might occur in hemorrhage of any kind.

A case of anemia cannot, therefore, be successfully overcome unless the kind of anemia is determined first.

The taking of iron or other so-called "blood making" substances or foods may or may not help the situation.

People get pale and pasty-looking and tire easily, especially in the spring months, and the first thing thought of is anemia.

Such individuals, however, may be perfectly normal as regards amount of blood in the system, the number of red corpuscles, and the hemoglobin content. All they need, often, is exercise and a good cleaning out of the digestive tract.

Real, true anemia sometimes is a serious condition.

In chronic, for example, an anemia found in young girls, the hemoglobin is reduced, relatively speaking.

It occurs more often in blondes than brunettes, especially between the ages of fourteen and seventeen.

Boys seem never to be affected.

The real cause remains unknown. The blood making organs seem to be weak.

This form of anemia may occur in girls who are brought up under the most favorable circumstances. In fact, the girl looks well-nourished, but the complexion is peculiar and of a certain yellow-green color.

Then there is pernicious anemia. The onset of this may be slow and insidious. The patients gradually grow pale and weak. Faintness and loss of breath on slight exertion may develop. Palpitation is common and the heart loses its force.

As time goes on, in untreated cases, the patients take to bed. It may prove fatal.

I have mentioned pernicious anemia not with any intention of frightening my readers, but rather to impress upon them that true anemia is not a disease to be trifled with.

If you think you are anemic or you have symptoms suggesting it the best thing to do is to consult your physician, who will soon decide whether anemia actually exists, and, if it does, whether it is of serious moment.

The presence of anemia need not be guesswork.

The doctor takes a drop of your blood and either examines it himself or sends it to a laboratory for such examination.

Such study coupled with the history or development of your symptoms will tell him exactly what is wrong.

Perhaps you will need iron and perhaps you will not. Find our first of all what kind of anemia you have.

Voodoo Worship

By LUCY LOWELL

VOODOO worship—oh, yes, you say—they do it in Africa or the South Sea Islands or somewhere a long way off. Where civilization hasn't reached and the natives don't know any better—that's where they worship devils, going through their weird, sometimes horrible, rites.

A relic of the days when the human race was young, this thing of wooing the good will of the powers of evil by treating them with the reverence worthy of a better cause. Folks believed that the devil was always about ready to make trouble and the best method of preventing this was to use him nicely.

Voodoo—a long way off from where you stand.

Well—is it? Aren't the tenacles of it wound in your habit somewhere, making you quick to propitiate evil, to step out from under trouble by acknowledging the potency of bad luck?

Do you throw a grain of spilled salt over your left shoulder? Do you fear to step back into the house once you have left it? Do you avoid looking at the new moon through a window pane?

Have you ever gone out of your way to keep from letting a black cat cross your path? Do you sometimes refuse to begin a new enterprise on Friday? Do you fear to start a journey on the sixth day of the week?

Do you worry yourself into illness when you break a mirror? Do you lie and shiver in horror late at night when the hoot-owl cries in the nearby wood?

When you put your shoes on mornings, are you careful that the right goes on first? Have you a lucky piece in your pocket? If there is something you wish to do that you are especially eager to see succeed, do you wait for a special day of the month to do it on?

Voodoo, my friends—all voodoo! Superstition, you'll object—but isn't that voodoo?

Superstition is the shadow fear casts and—listen to this for it's good—FEAR IS FAITH IN EVIL!

Tells of Big Firm

E. C. JOHNSON

Group at Big Plant

One of the most interesting outings yet enjoyed by members of the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery was a visit to the H. A. Johnson plant at 221 State st., yesterday afternoon.

At the invitation of Mr. E. C. Johnson, president of the company, and vice-president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, a group of 50 members of the Martha Lee Cooking School was entertained by this well known firm. The occasion was opened by an address by Mr. Johnson, who touched on the founding of the company by his father, H. A. Johnson, 53 years ago, and its growth to the largest bakers' supply house in the country.

Following came a tour of inspection of the entire factory showing the preparation and packaging of jellies, jams, mince meats, etc.

Mr. Griffin, of the Johnson Company, gave the history of the buying of many food products, including nuts, raisins, apples and figs. The serving of refreshments and the distribution of souvenirs closed a very pleasant and profitable afternoon.

FASHIONS

Expressing itself firmly, so you won't be in doubt, the sleeveless mode adopts the idea of the sleeveless dress and the accompanying sleeveless jacket. A vividly colored taffeta costume follows this plan with great success, and the circular skirt and low round neckline of dress enhance its smartness.

Advice to Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHEN parents disagree and separate, as they so often do in these restless days, it is the children who are the real victims. The real sufferers. Blighted home life too often leads to blighted romance.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes Helen on this subject, "I have often overheard my mother and dad saying they hoped our children would marry into good families—that is, families whether rich or poor, where there is happy home life. Mother says when parents don't get along, children are not as good as they would otherwise be.

"I have known Joe two years. We have been very serious the last few months. We have wonderful times together and nothing seems to be too good for me. We intend to get married in three or four years.

"Joe knows my parents would disapprove of my [illegible] with anyone who did not come from a nice family. I feel very badly, because he told me just lately that his father and mother have parted. For 15 years his father gambled and went with other women and wasted all his money. The family all got tired of it, with the result that his father has left home and does not give them any money.

"The question is, should I continue the friendship? If I do, how can I possibly tell my parents about this? [illegible] be very frank with me."

FRANKLY, Helen, I see no reason why your friendship for Joe should not continue. That Joe's father wronged and deserted his family is not in any sense a reflection on them—certainly not on Joe! Nor does it follow necessarily that Joe will be lacking as a husband, following his father's example. Never having enjoyed harmony at home, he may strive for and appreciate it all the more in his married life.

But I do think, Helen, dear, that you should talk the matter over with your mother with the same frankness and spirit you show in your letter to me. It is better that they should learn the facts from you and from your point of view, rather than from strangers. Your parents love you very much, and I am sure they will do all they can to encourage your friendship for Joe to the extent that it is really congenial and wise.

The BROADWAY MELODY

by JACK LAIT

A Story With a Thousand Thrilling Episodes

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

EDDIE KEENS, song plugger, has written the music for "The Broadway Melody," a big revue, to be produced by the famous Zanfield. For two years Eddie has been engaged to "Hank" Mahoney, and now he sees his way clear to marry her. She and her younger sister, Queenie, are playing in vaudeville. Eddie tells them he has managed to place them in the revue. Eddie discovers he's lost his heart to Queenie. He keeps his secret from "Hank."

When "Hank" arrives home with Eddie she discovers Queenie in bed and is overjoyed to find she really did not go out with "Harry." The latter sends one-half of a $1000 bill to Queenie. "Hank" returns and finds the torn $1000 bill. She is worried about Queenie, who broke loose. Eddie Oches, "Harry" makes another attempt to get Queenie to go out with him.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER 15

THE slam of the bedroom door in Queenie banged it shut between her and Eddie reverberated through the little sitting room.

Here was a deadline that Eddie, with all his Times sq. informality, didn't dare cross.

He flopped into the armchair and tried to think it out—

Why was Queenie growing more and more petulant toward him every time they met? He had never expressed or suppressed a perish." but she must know. And she wasn't indifferent to him either, he knew.

It was a treacherous, shameful emotion, his loving Queenie, and if she loved him it was even worse. But—what were conscience, good faith—hair-split sentimentalities all well enough to write snappy songs about—when bucking this maddening tugging at his vitals, which was actual, irresistible?

He had reconciled himself to what Hank might think and feel. It was too bad. She had been "mammy" and "pal" many before her. If Queenie grew up to be so infatuating, could he help it? Nature was at fault. That fight he had already fought out with himself and had given himself the decision That was when he felt his blood sizzle with the hunch that Queenie had been hit as hard as he had, and in the same spot.

But, now—the specter of Warriner had stalked in between them He, who had been prepared to make for her the great sacrifice of all including honor, was suddenly motioned back by the hot, repeated and unwelcome intruder who had nothing to even be sorry and hesitant over. What right had this rich fine-looking stranger from an alien field of hostile field to come between showfolks, the gypsy troubadours who clung together because no other tribe opened its gates to them?

Suppose, he Eddie Kerns, had projected himself between Frances Warriner and some swanky social register bud? Where would he have landed? On his head—and where he properly belonged, too.

So, could this millionaire get away with larceny off his own territory, With all his offensive sources and defensive resources, was he going to beat the barrier?

Eddie scowled . . . but soon he smiled . . . he, too, had weapons. tried and trusty ones. He glided oves toward the piano, ran his left hand up and down a few scales, then struck the chord, and started into his newest "number"two lips—

You're like a rose, dear, and everyone knows, dear,

That rosee are sweet to behold—
Your eyes are blue like the violet's hue,
Your hair like the buttercup's gold—
Your cheeks are pink as carnations, I think,
Your mouth is a pouting peony—
So I beg—and beg your pardon—
But, the two-lips in your garden—
Raise them just for me—

It Was No Better and No Worse Than Many Love Lyrics

It was no better or no worse than most of the love-lyrics written by the Eddies. For the inordinate unable to express a passion or a sorrow or a longing or a remorse or tenderness, except in terms how widely stirred by the urges of elemental motivations, they were as eloquent as sufficient as the bromidic stock phrases precomposed by the telegraph companies for the millions so that they may order by number their greetings.

Queenie, who had been standing before the mirror in the bedroom, fighting to repress her tears, stood rigid at the first note. As Eddie's clear voice gave forth the claptrap, shrewdly emphasized and shaded with musical knowledge, each fluctuations of pedaling, her bosom palpitated. It was he—the man she loved—serenading her like a cavalier of yore; it was he, weeping to her in his own voice and in their own language, it was he calling to her through the wilderness of the tangled triangle into which they had both been thrust with no way out in sight——

She ventured an unsteady hand on the knob and turned it cautiously. She peeked out. His back was to her, he was playing in a manner very reptile to the "catch-line," he chanted it crooningly:

So I beg—and beg your pardon,
But the two-lips in your garden—

Raise them just for me.

His hands lingered where they ran their postscript trill, then they slid limply off the keyboard. His head sagged downward and forward. His arms dangled at his sides. The taut wires were still vibrating, unseen. Then, all was silent . . . she stood there, at the door, driven by one headlong temptation, held back by a hundred long-headed scruples.

A sigh, involuntarily, penetrated deep and then escaped. Eddie did not jump at the sound. He turned slowly on the swivel of the piano stool. Queenie stood, quaking. He raised his head slowly. He was facing her. His eyes found hers. He said nothing. Then he raised his arms as though they were weary. He brought them up and spread them open.

"Queenie!" he gasped.

She staggered a step toward him. He was at her mercy, so broken, so violet-blue eyes—as Eddie had painted them in his song—came up. Its pouting peony mouth, the two-lips of her garden, were raised —in a pucker——

"—just for you," came through them.

With a cry he flung his arms about her, his lips sought hers—

The rasping sound of a key in the door was heard.

Eddie dropped his hold, stumbled backward——

Queenie, quivering like a boat in a storm and with knees giving, tried to snatch hurriedly at her disheveled hair.

Hank strode in. She blinked looked from one to the other, then laid down her parcels

"What's the matter?" she asked

Neither answered

"What's the matter?" she repeated. "You two battlin' again?"

Queenie turned, walked into the bedroom and slammed the door.

'Sinister House,' Great Six-Day Novel

"Kerry!" she whispered. "Come here—quick!"

"Look into the glass!"

He did so.

"What do you see?"

"Figures," he muttered. "Reflected from the blotter, 32—11—9—A. I think they are." He looked at Gail, frowning a little. "It's an awful scrawl. Somebody wrote down quick and blotted 'em quick—see how thick and smeared the strokes are. That isn't the colonel's seven—he put a curl in his horizontal stroke"

"Lord," he whistled. "The numerals of a combination—the vault!"

"If only it should be!" Gail breathed. "We'd have a real clew! Try it, Kerry!"

Gail endured an agony of suspense as Kerry gripped and swung upon the handle "Kerry!" she cried. It had turned.

He pushed a little ahead of triumph and opened the door. They entered the vault.

Gail drew out two shallow trays. They were lined with white satin and they were empty. She looked at Kerry significantly.

"Gone," he said.

Gail nodded, "Of course."

They lingered for a minute or two in the vault then went back into the library. Kerry looked at the triangle of blotter in his hand.

"Not so much of a clew after all," he said moodily. "The figures are too scrawly to be recognizab's as the handwriting of any particular person. . . make the same kind of a "7" myself. Still, it may help . . ."

"Kerry!" she whispered. "there's someone coming"

He looked at her besechingly. "I can't leave you—I can't—like this—"

Gail dug her fingers cruelly into his arm. "You must!"

He dived between the curtains. Somehow, Gail got the vault door shut. The door opened. A man entered. It was Norman Stark

There was suspicion and perplexity in his face. His eyes darted around the room, met hers again. And then she saw that he carried a pistol

"Are you looking for game, Mr Stark?" she smiled, in a friendly way.

His heavy face reddened. "I thought I heard some one moving around," he muttered.

"Probably you did. I've been here for many hours."

Stark dropped the weapon into a pocket. The suspicion lingered in his eyes, however. Kerry must be descending the cliff by this. Gail thought.

He moved toward her with that swift catlike gait by which she had identified him as the man she had seen in the moonlight. The suspicion had left his eyes; their expression terrified her.

"I wanted to see you, Gail Hotlister."

"Mr. Stark!"

"You little peach, you!" he whispered fatuously.

Gail recoiled. Not, however, at the touch of Stark's hands upon her, but at the sudden appearance of Kerry from behind the curtains

His lean face was white with fury as he hurled himself upon the man Kerry's left hand out! The man toppled back into the grate and lay still!

Just then, out at sea, a green light flamed. For perhaps three seconds it burned; then it went out to reappear an instant later for another three seconds. Again it flashed out and again it reappeared

As she flew down the path, Gail the signal—if signal it was

But she was too overcome by her emotions to reflect upon it

Gail stepped onto the threshold of the summer-house

"Dimity!" she whispered. "Dimity!"

He did not speak.

Gail put her hand on his. It was as cold as her own. She bent nearer, looked into his face; and then, with a scream, she fell back.

Everything around her went black and she pitched forward.

When Gail awoke the next morning in her room her first thought was of Kerry. Had he managed to elude his pursuers?

Mrs. Wessels entered

"Did Kerry O'Neil get away?" she found herself asking

Mrs Wessels pulled her arms

"Yes, Miss 'Olister . . . 'e got away.

"Dimity is dead, Mrs. Wessels," she faltered. "Do you know . . . anything about it?"

"Yes . . . his 'ead was smashed in with a wrench or an iron bar or something, Bartlett said. Oh, Miss 'Olister, it was 'orrible! I can't tell you!"

"Does Bartlett know who did it?" Gail whispered

"Bartlett said it was this Kerry O'Neil. Now don't take on about it, there's a brave girl!"

"It wasn't Kerry, Mrs Wessels," Gail said calmly. "He couldn't have done it. I've got to believe in him—as I do"

Gail rose and dressed She must see Bartlett and tell him all she knew Kerry would have been better off if she'd done it in the first place

Bartlett was in the library impatiently awaiting her. He sat at the table. Behind him stood Decker, sullen of face. He had got rid of the handcuffs, but his wrists were badly swollen. Stark held his old position by the window.

"Sit down," Bartlett said curtly, "Sit down, I say!"

Gail obeyed, and clasped her hands.

"Miss Hollister," Bartlett went on, "there is just one thing that will keep you out of jail."

"What is that?" she inquired.

"I want the Conniston intaglios. You know where they are."

Gail smiled wearily. "I don't know anything about the Conniston intaglios, but if you like I'll tell you what I do know."

"I had you didn't do that the other morning!" Bartlett rapped out. "It might have helped you then—if it won't now. But go ahead, if it'll relieve your mind."

His indifference was largely assumed, Gail believed. He was really intensely interested in what she had to say. So was Stark. He was leaning forward with a look of anticipation

When Gail had done there was silence for a moment. Bartlett lit a cigar with maddening slowness.

"Quite a yarn," he drawled. "You don't expect me to believe it, do you?"

"No," she said steadily. "I supposed you wouldn't"

Bartlett drew on his cigar. "If you'd told me this before," he said harshly, "we might have grabbed O'Neil and saved Dimity."

Gail protested. "What do you mean by that?" she whispered. She knew very well what he meant.

"I mean that Dimity got onto something and that O'Neil cracked him over the head to shut him mouth. We'll get him, of course. I've got ten men on the peninsula, looking for him. Come through with the intaglios, my girl!"

Gail faced him again. "I don't know anything about them! Norman Stark! He can tell you! Ask him about Colonel Conniston and Cyrill Daniel"

Stark's heavy face crimsoned. "By God, girl! Have you the effrontery to accuse me of that, too?"

Gail whirled upon him again. "Yes I have! You overheard us in the patio! You came back here."

"Silence there!" Bartlett thundered. "Stark, shut up! Hollister, sit down!"

Gail faced him defiantly. She had never been bewitchingly lovely in her anger. Then she sank down into the chair.

Gail Had Backed to the Wall Near the Door

Gail had backed to the wall near the door. Kerry sprang towards her.

"That beast, Gail! He touched you!"

Her eyes, dilated with terror, were staring over Kerry's shoulder

"Pretty neat, O'Neil. Now put up your hands and keep 'em up!"

It was Bartlett.

Kerry obeyed reluctantly. His dark eyes coolly met the deputy's "Sorry, but you've made us a lot of trouble. You might as well have given yourself up at first."

Stark had left the door ajar Gail stood well within the shadows beyond the circle of light cast by the lamp. Kerry saw the door that without moving she had been able to take the key out of the lock unobserved. Immediately behind her was the light switch Bartlett stood 20 feet or so in front of Kerry. Peter Kerry was a chair.

Her plan was to divert Bartlett's attention from Kerry for an instant and in that instant switch out the light, fling open the door and hurl herself into the hall.

"What were you doing here?" Bartlett demanded of Kerry. "Looking for clews," Kerry responded airily.

Gail replied. "We found that the Conniston intaglios really are gone."

"Wasn't that clever of you!"

"A Trap-Door," He Muttered, and He Swiftly Lifted It

"A trap-door" he muttered. He swiftly lifted it and they started down a ladder that dropped into a fissure in the rock upon which the Casa de Ayer was built. The stench of rotting kelp rose.

"This is the way the man that killed Conniston got in and out of the house!" cried Kerry.

"Stark——"

"It was Stark."

"Of course it was, Kerry! He came through the grounds, climbed down the summer-house trail—that's the quickest way to the beach—and came up through here! He went back the same way."

Gail looked at Kerry. "You're not afraid to try it? I'll be all right."

It was his only chance. He set his foot on the ladder.

In terror Gail knelt by the trap and listened as Kerry descended into the darkness. Momentarily she expected to hear a cry and the thud of a fallen body.

"Kerry!" she called

"All right!" His response came to her clearly.

Gail closed the trap door.

Bartlett was the first inside. The eye of his torch lighted on Gail's head. He seized her savagely by the arm. "Where is O'Neil?"

She did not answer. His fingers dug into her flesh like talons of steel.

Stark had just entered, torch in hand. He was swollen of lip and sullen of eye and he glared at Gail balefully. Peters and another man were behind him. Both carried torches and the light of Peters's torch circled around the ring in the trap door. His shout brought them crowding around him. As he lifted the trap Stark gave a cry of amazement.

"I never saw this before" he shouted thickly

So he intended to pretend ignorance of the trap door! was Gail's quick thought. But he would, of course.

Bartlett cast the beam of his torch into the black depths at his feet and recklessly dropped down, the ladder, Stark and Peters following behind him.

Gail dragged herself to the trap and stared down into the cavern below. By the light of the torches she got a sort of impression of broad shallow steps. The men vanished in pursuit. Kerry and Gail knew a way that she was alone.

Just then she remembered her appointment with Dimity in the summer-house!

Dimity had intimated that he meant to tell her who had killed Col. Conniston

She must find him. Suddenly, on the way she saw Decker stumbling toward her. His hands still manacled in front of him. Then she fled to the summer-house.

Gail obeyed, and clasped her hands.

"Miss Hollister," Bartlett went on, "there is just one thing that will keep you out of jail."

"What is that?" she inquired.

"I want the Conniston intaglios. You know where they are."

Gail smiled wearily. "I don't know anything about the Conniston intaglios, but if you like I'll tell you what I do know."

"I had you didn't do that the other morning!" Bartlett rapped out. "It might have helped you then—if it won't now. But go ahead, if it'll relieve your mind."

His indifference was largely assumed, Gail believed. He was really intensely interested in what she had to say. So was Stark. He was leaning forward with a look of anticipation

When Gail had done there was silence for a moment. Bartlett lit a cigar with maddening slowness.

"Quite a yarn," he drawled. "You don't expect me to believe it, do you?"

"No," she said steadily. "I supposed you wouldn't"

Bartlett drew on his cigar. "If you'd told me this before," he said harshly, "we might have grabbed O'Neil and saved Dimity."

Gail protested. "What do you mean by that?" she whispered. She knew very well what he meant.

"I mean that Dimity got onto something and that O'Neil cracked him over the head to shut his mouth. We'll get him, of course. I've got ten men on the peninsula, looking for him. Come through with the intaglios, my girl!"

Gail faced him again. "I don't know anything about them! Norman Stark! He can tell you! Ask him about Colonel Conniston and Cyrill Daniel"

Stark's heavy face crimsoned. "By God, girl! Have you the effrontery to accuse me of that, too?"

Gail whirled upon him again. "Yes I have! You overheard us in the patio! You came back here."

"Silence there!" Bartlett thundered. "Stark, shut up! Hollister, sit down!"

Gail faced him defiantly. She had never been bewitchingly lovely in her anger. Then she sank down into the chair.

"Stark Did Not Kill Either Conniston or Dimity."

"Stark did not kill either Conniston or Dimity!" Gail said curtly. "That is clear to me, if it isn't to you. He is more interested in finding Angina than any one else, that catch and hull varn of O'Neil's to the contrary. Conniston died without a will. Stark is his sole heir."

There came an interruption just then. Unnoticed by Gail, Mrs Wessels had hovered in the doorway.

"Wot's all this about a will, Mr Fairlett? Let me tell you there is a will. Or there was!" she added, confusedly.

"How do you know?"

"The Colonel told me himself! And what's more, I saw it lying on that very table"

Mrs. Wessels said this with a fine sense of effect

"The Colonel said 'e was providing for Dimity and me." And somely, too,' 'e said, like the gentleman he was. That was enough for me."

"I phoned Prescott, Conniston's lawyer" Bartlett commented thoughtfully. "And there was no will, so far as he knew. If there is one, it's a holograph, I suppose"

"Yr if there is one!" Stark sneered.

"There must be—or have been," Gail observed, deliberately. "Colonel Conniston wouldn't have spoken of it to Mrs. Wessels unless there was. Perhaps," she bantered shrewdly, "its contents will explain the disappearance—when we find it"

Further hostilities were prevented by the intervention of Decker During the last minute or two he had been prowling around the vault

"Take a look at this, will yuh, chief?"

He held something on the blotter in front of Bartlett. Gail saw what appeared to be a tiny fragment of gray paper with such an edge might have been pulled out of a fraved coat sleeve.

"Where did you find this?" Bartlett demanded.

"Stuck on the edge of the vault door," Decker proudly, indicated the place.

"Some one who wore an old gray tweed coat. Mrs. Wessels!"

But the housekeeper was already hurrying out of the room, troubled of face.

A minute or so later she returned carrying a coat of gray tweed, much worn, much darned and spotted with grease. Gail stared. And then, as she recognized the coat, a cry of astonishment broke from her.

"Whose is it?" he said, curtly.

Mrs. Wessels drew a deep breath. "Dimity's," she whispered. "'e was wearing it the night the Col

"Old King Brady"

CHAPTER 3

Old King Brady calls on Superintendent Downs of Burton mills. Downs refuses his assistance. The old detective discovers that Downs is a traitor and has agreed to turn the mills over to the outlaws, and decides to frustrate the plan.

OLD KING BRADY and his three men reached Burton Mills just at dark.

"Has Capt. Thunderbolt ever attacked the Burton Mills?" the old detective asked Mose Medford.

"He tried it once, but got driven off."

The detective rode directly up to the office. A man hurried up to him. "Who do you want to see, boss?" he demanded.

"Mr. Downs, if he is in."

"He's in the office. Go on in." He opened the door and found himself in the office.

Old King Brady presented his card. "Well, sir, what is it you wish?" Mr. Downs asked coldly.

"I have been commissioned by the Governor to hunt down Capt. Thunderbolt. My first discovery is that Capt. Thunderbolt and his men intend making a raid on Burton Mills tonight.

"I intend no incivility, Mr. Brady, but your warning is of little consequence to me. We are fully prepared to meet any raid for we have a perfect system here, sir. We have turned off this outlaw once and can do it again. "He turned back to his desk. "I don't want your help or the Governor's, either."

"Very good, sir. Under the circumstances I see no other course than to retire as gracefully as possible," said the old detective with his blandest smile. "Good evening Mr. Downs."

Old King Brady had drawn his own conclusion during his brief interview with the superintendent of Burton Mills.

"Well, what's the word, cap?" inquired Mose Medford. "Don't we tie up here?"

"No, we don't. We are not wanted around here. We go on our way."

As Old King Brady threw himself into the saddle, the clerk came hurrying out of the office. "Mr. Brady," he called. "Mr. Downs wants me to say he can give you and these three men a room with blankets where you can pass the night. We'll take care of your horses, too"

"Tell Mr. Downs that I am greatly obliged to him, but I must decline his offer," the detective replied cheerfully. They rode away out of the mill yard and back on the Tensleep trail. "Keep right on to the top of the hill, we'll tie up in that bit of pine wood we saw there," he said.

Old Mose drew alongside Mr Brady. "I ax your pardon for butt'in', Mr. Brady, but I'm interested to know what the row was about."

"You row The man was cold and insolent. He declined my help and he told me to mind my own business, that's all"

More pondered some minutes before speaking. "Don't that seem mighty strange to you, Mr. Brady?"

"It does and we'll watch that man

FORCING BIDS—O. 1

A FORCING bid in Contract is any bid that must logically be interpreted as a demand upon partner to keep the bidding open in order to arrive at the best declaration in the combined partnership hands for a game or a slam contract. Thus, a forcing bid always shows a further bid in hand of bidder depending upon the partnership response thereto.

Clearly to define what must logically be interpreted as forcing, bids involve three enumerations as follows:

1—Original TWO BID over one or No Trump.

2—Bids of less than game and re-assertions which come under the trick more than once.

3—Takeouts of one trick more than necessary.

4—Defensive or take-out trick more than necessary.

1—Original TWO bids over one or No Trump.

The Contract player, of course, bids as that game is possible even if with average, or less than average support in hand of partner. It may only abandon a further bid in hand if bidder the underlying principle of all forcing bids), but must be interpreted as an imperative demand for partner, either to assist a take-out unless lacking one probable trick for an assist or two for take-out.

2—Bidder bids assists and re-asserts beyond game contract.

Whatever are not specifically forcing as in that they do not specifically guarantee a further bid in hand if bidder has are forcing bids in—one that there are a reasonable partner to try for game or slam, should be bold, such as would be justified.

Tomorrow's article will continue the discussion of the subject of forcing bids.

MERELY THE BAER FACTS

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

ANY man who has ever been asked to step up on the stage by a mind reader or any woman who has had halitosis at a masked ball can appreciate Colonel Lindbergh's request for a little isolation and quiet.

After all, Lindy is entitled to some sort of recognition in addition to civic geysers of steam and noise.

We saw Lindy come down at Le Bourget. Later events proved that he never was in danger so long as he stayed over the ocean.

The minute he landed he was swamped by 50,000 Frenchmen. And he hasn't read a book since.

Since he flew the Atlantic he has listened to millions of toastmasters and has heard plenty of celery eaten in his honor.

He has shaken so many hands that he has to carry around an auto mechanic for his elbow.

Lindy must feel something like Harry Fox. Quite a few years ago Harry was married to one of the Dolly Sisters. Yesterday we met Harry on the street and he said:

"I am looking forward to my next nervous breakdown, so that I can enjoy a little rest."

Which is a recipe almost as good as that concocted by Bob Davis, famous editor of magazines.

Bob used to go to his club in order to get away from his friends.

Lindy proved that he had no nerves. But some rich admirer is liable to die and bequeath him a set.

Just take a look at the Colonel's romance. He is engaged to a very sweet girl. She is the only girl he ever loved. But so far as privacy is concerned he might as well be Joseph Smith or Brigham Young.

Now, if there is one time when a man should be alone it is when his best girl is with him.

But when Lindy puts his arm around her, he has got to stop and ask, "Who are those other people on the sofa?"

If he gets up from the sofa to turn down the parlor lamp, 6000 admirers immediately switch on their pocket flashlights.

We'll bet that when Lindy gets married, folks will expect him to spend his honeymoon in the Smithsonian Institution.

Even now they say that the Colonel is getting irritable. So would you be if you couldn't pull your shadow loose from thousands of public receptions.

If you want to do the Colonel real honor, why not have a Lindy Week?

Seven days in which the Colonel could shave himself and not be sued for splashing lather on total strangers.

The Irish bogs are almost as great in extent as those of Germany. While the latter are from nine to twenty feet deep, the Irish variety often reaches forty feet. It has been calculated that each acre of bog contains 18,221 tons of peat stuff.

'THE RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY', THE FAMOUS DETECTIVE

tonight," said the old detective. "But here we are. Shake us up some supper, Mose. We have our blankets and we ought to be comfortable enough."

Supper over, Old King Brady walked down the hill toward the Burton Mills, which were about half a mile away. He had not gone far when he saw a man wearing a long linen duster and a white sombrero coming towards him.

"I'll bet that is no one but that impudent rascal Downs!" thought Old King Brady. It was too late for him to turn back as the other had caught sight of him.

"Oh, it is you, is it?" Downs exclaimed as he came up to the old detective.

"Good evening, Mr. Downs, are you taking a stroll?" asked Old King Brady blandly.

"Why, yes. I thought you had gone long ago," was the reply.

"We only halted for supper. We shall soon be on the move."

Mr. Downs was plainly relieved. "I am afraid you think I was a little abrupt with you this evening, Mr. Brady. I think I was and I apologize."

"I accept your apology."

"You see my men are good fighters and are perfectly drilled. So we have no fears. Capt. Thunderbolt will never dare to attack Old King Brady.

After a few more words Mr. Downs bade Old King Brady good evening and returned down the hill.

"A rascal if there ever was one. Sly and tricky! I wonder what his game is?" thought the old detective. He continued his walk. His real object was to find a hiding place where he could locate his men without being seen. He found such a spot between two rocky ledges which was just wide enough to admit a mounted man. Beyond this was a hollow.

To this place he removed his men, later. Until long after midnight Old King Brady kept watch. At last, from sheer fatigue, he dropped off for an instant. A rifle shot roused him with a start.

"Confound it! that shot was surely a signal."

He looked over the ledge toward the mills just in time to see a window open and a man lean out swinging a lighted lantern three times. "That's Downs," thought Old King Brady. "What mischief is that man up to?" Lights began to flash about the mill yard, and men could be seen moving about.

At last Old King Brady saw two wagons come wheeling out of the mine yard, the sort in which bullion is transported. Old King Brady was sure now that a plot was on foot to attack the two wagons. He felt a heavy hand on his shoulder. He whipped out his gun and turned about. Mose Medford was standing there. "Oh! It's you," he said with a feeling of relief. "Mose, I believe that Downs means mischief," and he told him of the signalling he had seen.

Mose grew quite excited. "Of course, it does! What be you going to do?"

"I'll tell you in a few minutes. Here are the wagons. Let's watch them go by."

The heavy wagons passed and then Old King Brady heard the challenge given and the clatter of Capt. Thunderbolt's bold advance ahead of his men.

"Captured, by thunder!" he exclaimed. "It is just as I thought. Downs has sold out to him, and chances are 10 to 1 he has sold out the mill as well. Listen, Mose. Wake up the men and we'll dash down and capture Downs. If we can save the mills there'll be a big reward coming, of which you shall all have your share."

In less than five minutes the party was on its way down the hill. As they rode along Old King Brady quickly matured his plans. "If a bolt is right behind me. The mill must be saved. Your plottings are known. Tell me the quickest way to arouse all hands, or I shall take the law into my own hands. I am acting under the governor's authority to shoot Capt. Thunderbolt or any of his friends."

"There's the steam whistle," gasped Downs, as pale as death.

"Enough! Lead the way. Shoot him, boys, if he balks."

"Wha-what's this? A raid!" gasped the engineer, catching sight of the superintendent.

"We are here to bust a raid, friend," said the detective. "The bullion wagons are already captured, and the gang is near the mill. Blow your whistle. Rouse all hands. We must put up a fight fellow like you!" snarled the baffled villain.

Throwing off his mask Old King Brady stood revealed.

"By thunder!" gasped Downs. "Old King Brady, the detective."

"Trapped!" was the reply and the revolver was thrust closer. "Now listen. I believe Capt. Thunderbolt is right behind me. The mill must be saved. Your plottings are known. Tell me the quickest way to arouse all hands, or I shall take the law into my own hands. I am acting under the governor's authority to shoot Capt. Thunderbolt or any of his friends."

"There's the steam whistle," gasped Downs, as pale as death.

IS YOUR CHILD A MANUAL IDIOT?

When struck with hammer, does your boy's knee reflex like this? Try it some time.

Parents can often determine a child's natural bent by simple home tests.

For example, it is well to find out whether or not the youngster is a manual idiot.

Smear the child's hands with grease. Then lock him in a closed car. Peek through the window. If the child wipes his hands on the upholstering, then he has the temperament of an automobile mechanic or garage owner, and there is nothing you can do about it.

However, a bill is being prepared for the Legislature which will provide that every boy at the age of twelve be automatically placed in Leavenworth Penitentiary. Our readers are urged to work for the passage of this measure.

Anyway, the spirit of law enforcement is flaming to new heights since the passage of the Jones bill. Note the following item from New Mexico:

"The Sheriff of Quay County has served notice on the bootleggers of that county that he will allow them a reasonable time to get rid of their stock on hand and then to keep out of the business, as he and his office forces are going to see that the business is going to be kept out of Quay County, or so far as they are able. He stated that while he knew he could not keep some from selling whiskey and home brew, the practice can be done less openly and not in front of everyone, and protection for the violators is a thing of the past, at least, for two years."

STOP BAD BREATH

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are known for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c. All druggists.

DINE AND DANCE

MISS CLARKE AT PALAIS D'OR

Miss Irene Clarke heads the bill at Palais d'Or this week as mistress of ceremonies. Miss Clarke has recently completed a tour of the Pantages circuit. She also was connected with the Club Lido in New York city.

Jimmy "Bill" Hanging on Gallagher entertained as his personal guest, Connie Dugan, prominent Chelsea politician and William A. Mara, prominent police official from Illinois, last night at the Palais d'Or. Devere and Kiki offer something new in a Mexican "Whoopee" dance. This week's program promises to be one of the most unusual ever presented in Boston.

Irene Clarke

Dempsey and Devaux at the Symphony

Dempsey and Devaux have been retained at the Symphony restaurant at the request of their many patrons and are offering an entirely new program this week which promises to surpass many of their past performances. The team of Lesmae and Josine, well known to Boston's night club habitues, will teach, free of charge to the patrons of this night club, the Argentine Tango from 1:15 p. m. to 2:15 p. m.

The manager extends most courteous welcome to all who wish to take advantage of this offer. Collegiate contest and semifinals will be held tonight. This contest has run for a number of weeks and through a process of elimination we now offer some of New England's greatest amateur dancers.

NEW FEATURES AT MAH JONG

Miss Bonnie LeBeau, popular mistress of ceremonies, has returned from New York, where she was entertained as personal guest of Tex Guinan, prominent night club hostess. Miss LeBeau promises plenty of new ideas in night club entertainment.

Winton D. Bee, popular manager, has become an enthusiast in aviation and has eight hours solo flying to his credit. Mr. Bee is evidently planning a trip to California and expects to teach some fair actress in the gentle art of flying.

See 'Week in Paris' at Yoeng's Kenmore

Harry King and his crew have dropped anchor for a "Week in Paris" at Yoeng's Kenmore Restaurant at Kenmore Station. This popular "World's Cruise" program has proved to be most successful in the peppy manner and unique settings. It's Folies Bergers style has met with much approval of the patrons.

Ah, but next week, pretty blondes and plenty of them who will entertain gentlemen who prefer blondes. This is the first time in the history of Boston's night clubs that an all-blonds revue has been provided. Henry Davis' Apache Orchestra is furnishing plenty of Parisian music.

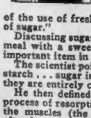
Sugar's five uses in the diet . . .
Authority explains this delicious food



WE RECENTLY asked the food scientist at one of the great universities to describe the rightful place of sugar in the diet.
"Sugar has five distinctive uses," he said. "1. A conserver of foods. 2. A flavoring substance. 3. A satisfaction factor. 4. A staple fuel. 5. An emergency food."
The scientist showed that sugar is used as a conserver of many foods, especially fruits. Discussing sugar as a flavorer, the scientist said: "One of the most praiseworthy developments of the modern diet lies in the expansion of the use of fresh fruits . . . contingent on the free availability of sugar."
Discussing sugar as a satiation factor, he said: "Topping off the meal with a sweet dessert gives a sense of satiation . . . an important item in the diet."
The scientist pointed out that "Sugar as a staple fuel ranks with starch . . . sugar is more rapidly digested than starch; otherwise they are entirely comparable fuels."
He then defined the use of sugar as an emergency fuel. "The process of transformation is so rapid," he said, "that sugar appears in the muscles (the fire-box of the body) within a few minutes after ingestion."
So is that sugar is one of the most useful and least expensive of foods. As a flavorer alone, it deserves a place in every diet for making other healthful foods delicious.
Eat all kinds of healthful fresh and canned fruits and vegetables, sweetening for pleasure, remembering the satiation value of ice creams, cookies and cakes for dessert. The best cooks are generous with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

MEDFORD GIRL JOINS QUEST CANDIDATES

The Quest draws to its end.

Four more days remain, then the nominations must be closed once and for all, in the Boston Evening American-Smart Set Magazine Quest for the "Typical American Girl."

Some time during this month the local judges will select the candidate who is "New England's Typical Girl." She will receive the special $500 award.

Then she will be matched against the regional winners chosen by the other Hearst newspapers, and the girl picked by the national committee will be given a $2000 award and a trip to Europe.

Nominations will still be received if they are postmarked no later than midnight, Saturday, April 13, and addressed according to the rules.

Among the candidates nominated today is Miss Elsie Capithorne, 253 Boston st., Medford. She was presented by Miss Nina Maggioli, 4a Winthrop st., Medford. In her nomination of Miss Capithorne Miss Maggioli says:

"I hope she will meet the requirements of the 'Typical American Girl.'

"Elsie is 5 feet, 5 inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, 18 years of age, has blue eyes and brown bobbed hair.

"Miss Capithorne is an exceptionally good dancer, swimmer and skater. She plays tennis and is a good horseback rider.

"In addition to being a sport addict, she has a charming personality and is liked by all who know her.

"With best luck for success."

Nominations are still open.

Candidates may have photographs made by applying to the Quest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, room 203, before Saturday, 5 p. m.

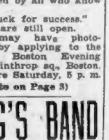
WARING'S BAND FILM FEATURE

"Harmony with a smile behind it," is what Fred Waring believes the public wants. So this internationally famous master of melody, director of the Pennsylvanians and their Orchestra that plays mine sweetening numbers in "Syncopation," the musical film extravaganza at the Keith-Albee Theater this week, gives the public what it wants.



Fred Waring

"The type of music played by my orchestra cannot be termed jazz," says Waring, and in reality, what I term 'modern melody' I give them comedy with their music, novelty. We use only the finest instruments known to the world of music, but key our music to the popular theater audience, meaning by that the great masses of people who attend motion picture entertainment.

"These people, while possessing a great appreciation for all that is good in music, demand popular style and popular programs."

Louis Newman Made Theater Manager

Louis Newman, assistant manager of the Washington Street Olympia, was today promoted to be manager of the Field's Corner Theater, Dorchester, in the Publix chain. Manager Newman is a Boston "boy" born in Dorchester 27 years ago, so that in rising to a full managership he returns to his old home district. He was formerly publicity manager for Norrah Minevitch, now a theatrical star. Then he became assistant to Manager Frank Hookalo of the Washington Street Olympia. He rapidly secured full grasp of the business, and thus his promotion quickly followed.

"I am sorry to lose him from my staff, but for his sake mightly glad that he has risen another niche," said Manager Hookalo today in announcing the change. "He deserves the advancement that has come to him. We in the motion picture game all wish him the best of good fortune."

Netoco Community Opens on Monday

An outstanding example of the fine type of theaters being erected by the New England Theater Operating Corporation, the New Netoco Community on Washington st., in the heart of Allston's growing business district, throws open its doors next Monday. Under construction for the past six months, the Netoco Community, together with the building which houses it, represents an investment of $300,000.

An exhaustive study of early American architecture was conducted for Daniel Pinanski, Netoco's president, aided by his staff of technical experts before the plans for the Community were drawn up. The latest type Wurlitzer organ, Vitaphone, and Movietone assure the successful presentation of the modern high-class picture program. Spacious parking areas are convenient to the theater.

George Hanscomb, popular North Attleboro theater man, who for the past several years has been manager of the Netoco Elm, has been appointed manager of the Netoco Community.

ARTHRITIS

Mrs. E. Compton, 178 Appleton St., Cambridge, Mass., says:—"I had suffered from arthritis for some time. The physicians I employed did not benefit me, but the first few pains were in my feet and knees, then they entered my whole body. I heard of Dr. Walsh and had him treat me. At this time I was so bad that it was difficult for me to move about the house. Since Dr. Walsh treated me I feel fine and gladly recommend Dr. Walsh to all who suffer as I did."

Taunton's Lighting Plant, Selling Electricity to Householders for 8 Cents a Kilowatt Hour, Makes the City Council a Present of $100,000 OUT OF ONE YEAR'S EARNINGS

Propagandists who like to deluge the newspapers with reports that the municipal lighting plants of Buchaplace, N. D., and Wheresthis, N. M., have been sold to private interests by disillusioned citizens, MAY be interested by what follows.

At any rate, it comes from near at hand and can be verified at the cost of two postage stamps or a telephone call.

In 1897, the City of Taunton took over the local lighting plant, paying $125,000 for it.

Under municipal management the department continued to lose money for all of 13 years. The turn came in 1919, due, perhaps, to the cheaper cost of making electricity. Annually since that time the project has shown a profit. The present value of the property is $2,200,000.

Revenue last year amounted to $610,000, gross operating PROFIT to $181,000.

Wondering what to do with so much money, the Taunton Municipal Lighting Commission asked Mayor and Council PLEASE to accept $100,000. Nothing of the kind had ever happened before in the city's history.

The windfall will pay HALF the cost of a $200,000 addition to Taunton High School.

Nor is this all.

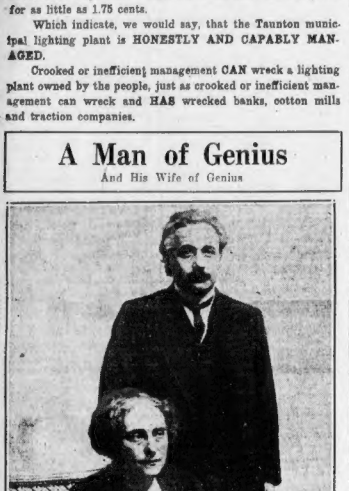
How much do YOU pay for electricity? The Taunton householder buys it for 8 cents a kilowatt hour, users of power for as little as 1.75 cents.

Which indicate, we would say, that the Taunton municipal lighting plant is HONESTLY AND CAPABLY MANAGED.

Crooked or inefficient management CAN wreck a lighting plant owned by the people, just as crooked or inefficient management can wreck and HAS wrecked banks, cotton mills and traction companies.

A Man of Genius

And His Wife of Genius



PROFESSOR ALBERT EINSTEIN, "MASTER OF PHYSICAL SCIENCE," AND HIS ADMIRABLE WIFE

Millions will be interested in this picture of Professor Einstein, author of the theory of relativity, expounder of the mysterious "Fourth Dimension," advocating the theory that the universe is NOT infinite, a scientific puzzle to the world at large and to science itself.

You have read of the Einstein theory.

You know about the recently published little book of only six pages, to the production of which Professor Einstein has devoted more than ten years of study.

If wise, you will realize that some things, like the sky for instance, are admirable, but not within reach. The Einstein theory is one of them, too far away for the average human being.

But apart from the relativity theory, or the nature of the cosmos, you are much interested in these two fine faces.

Professor Einstein you would take for a musician of talent, if you did not know him. His face certainly indicates genius and concentration.

The photograph of Mrs. Einstein tells you that the great physicist is happy in his marriage, and, doubtless, like thousands of other successful men, owes much of what he has achieved to his wife, her patience and her care.

Well may the Bible say:

"Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil.

"She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life."

Ain't It the Truth!

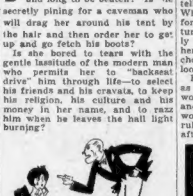
Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

DOES the modern woman need and long to be beaten? Is she secretly pining for a caveman who will drag her around his tent by the hair and then order her to get up and go fetch his boots?

Is she bored to tears with the gentle lassitude of the modern man who permits her to "backseat drive" him through life—to select his friends and his cravats, to keep his religion, his culture and his money in her name, and to razz him when he leaves the hall light burning?



Do you know, I almost believe that she does—and is!

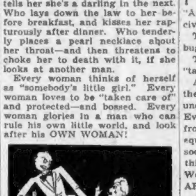
There is a primitive admiration down in every woman's heart for a MASTERFUL man—a man who can make her behave! Or make her suffer! She may hate the brute who bullies her, but she despises the mollycoddle who permits her to bully HIM.

What the modern man needs is more of the "You're-MY-WOMAN-and-don't-you-forget-it!" attitude; the "I-have-spoken-and-that's-sufficient" attitude. But he has become too hazy, too disinterested, too tender-hearted and too indifferent to assert his own position and boss his own wife.

His attitude is that of "Anything-to-keep-the - Little - Woman-quiet!" And the Little Woman has got the halter around his neck and the blinders on his eyes, and is driving him at her own sweet will. But it doesn't give her any kick!

The kind of man that every normal woman adores is the one who orders her about in one breath, and tells her she's a darling in the next. Who lays down the law to her before breakfast, and kisses her rapturously after dinner. Who tenderly places a pearl necklace about her throat—and then threatens to choke her to death with it, if she looks at another man.

Every woman thinks of herself as "somebody's little girl." Every woman loves to be "taken care of" and protected—and bossed. Every woman glories in a man who can rule his own little world, and look after his OWN WOMAN!



All the gigolos in the country would have starved to death, long ago, all the near-sheiks and woman-tamers would be working for a living instead of dancing around with bored matrons and other men's wives if the modern husband would stop chasing dollars or golf-balls long enough to watch his own WIFE, and make her behave!

In the old days, when a woman knew that bullets would fly and heads get beaten up, if she tried flirting with other men, divorces were very rare, and "stepping wives" practically unknown.

What the modern woman longs for is to be taken care of, guarded, and bossed. What she needs is a lord and master! And if lots of wives are bullies or flirts or back seat-drivers, it's because the modern husband is too lazy, or too tired or too effete to take the trouble to conquer his OWN WOMAN.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

PRESIDENT HOOVER in his inaugural address said that "Americans are building a new civilization."

To some, there's the challenge of bugles in that statement.

To some, there's the sadness of "taps."

All know that it is true. Within the last 20 years American life has undergone a tremendous upheaval. Everything about it has changed, from the simplest detail of material equipment to the subtlest phrase of social attitude. We use different things. We do different things. We think different things. We ARE different things.

And this is both maddening and tragic to many people.

They look back with longing on the "good old days."

They recall how much quieter those days were, how much slower, simpler and more peaceful.

A prettier world, a pleasanter age, safe and snug and comfortable.

Recalling it, they look with anger and dismay at this roaring new world.

This ugly new world filled with machinery, smoke and noise—

This speedy new world in which folk may no longer dawdle.

This ruthless new world in which folk may no longer pretend—

And they hate it.

Bitterly they bewail the passing of the good old days and plan hopefully for their return.

But they plan in vain—the "good old days" will never return. We have left them forever.

Humanity has passed out of that older form of civilization as definitely as it passed out of the cave dweller period—out of its nomadic tents—out of its tiny walled villages.

It was inevitable that, in time, primitive men should leave caves and make huts for themselves but it was undoubtedly regarded as a catastrophe by the Older Generation of the time. They, too, must have wailed loudly for the "good old days," pointed out the discomfort and danger of the new way of living and said that the Young Folks would soon get sick of huts and go back to the rocks.

But they didn't go back to the rocks. Huts came and tents came and walled villages came and in time great cities came, in spite of the walls. Walls cannot stop evolution.

Do not condemn the wailers. Pity them, rather.

Evolution is always painful. It is particularly painful for dwellers in the 20th century, for never has life changed so completely in such a short space of time.

There is a greater gap between the background of the older fathers and mothers of today and the background of their children than there was between any three generations of the past. And it takes tremendous intelligence and devotion to bridge that gap. But the older generation must bridge it or be lost in the shuffle.

We can no longer cling to our caves. We can no longer cling to cave-man attitudes. We must tune in with the tremendous tempo of the new civilization—for it is the tempo of life. Life on the march. We must abandon the old ways of looking at life, the petty suspicions, the piffling sentimentalities, and snap into the new, impersonal attitude.

OUT OF THE CAVE AND INTO THE BIG PROGRESSION—that's the slogan of 1929. God help the stubborn human who refuses to hear it!

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, April 10—Luncheon inspires more smart dressing these days than dinner. For some time dining out has been slumping. The annoyance in serving cocktails, wines and liquors had much to do with it. And what Mr. Hoover said added a dot to the restraint.

There was also the haste required to rush to the theater and opera, even in the newly-regulated traffic, to be considered. One may visit many of those erstwhile haunts where formal dress was almost obligatory and not find the dining rooms more than half filled.

By 9 almost every first class place in town is deserted. Those who used to entertain in public now entertain at home. The well-dressed lady these days parades the new frock between 12 and 2. Such places as the Ritz, Colony, Pierre's, Margucry, Sherry's, Crillon, etc., are packed then.

Luncheon has become leisurely—a two-hour affair with another hour to gossip in the coffee room. The biggest display of jewels used to flash at night, but are now often seen at noon. That is why the most popular places are dim with a seductive haze of light.

From a darkened corner a quick gesture scatters a thousand stars from a wrist of diamond bracelets. One sees the dark flame of black opals, novelties in carved and painted crystal, cold white pearls, velvety green jade and all the popular gems extolled in the jewelry ads.

The most famous fashion designers lend their talents to the luncheon ensemble. Ladies are buying more mid-day costumes than they are for evening wear. And the prices are higher. There are luncheon costumes from $200 to $500 and the average is $300.

Fashionable luncheon places, too, have become a show window for those demure girls aching to get on in the world. They may display their fine feathers. Perhaps they fall under the appraising eye of a movie magnate. Or a theatrical producer. Or a rich blade chafing in single harness.

A BLOCK on East 60th st. offers a row of unique and highly specialized shops. They cater to the upper East Side's Gold Coast. One establishment is engaged in removing spots from expensive fabrics. It is not a dry cleaning place—just a spot remover. A shop deals exclusively in occult books and another in psycho-analytical tomes. A magnificent hand laundry has a reception room in modernistic style. There is a florist whose customers pay from $50 to $150 weekly to furnish flowers, from table decorations to the gentleman's lapel flower.

I LIKE the story—related by Chic Sale—of the New York girl, just married, keeping house on a farm near Scarsdale. Each morning she ties up the garbage with bright ribbons and brings it to town to deposit in a green tin street corner repository.

AND a heckler drove a pretty vaudeville singer to eventual hysteria on upper Broadway. The lady's climatical song had a line ending: "But darling I'll be true to you!" And a piqued boy friend in the gallery would intone: "Also the army and navy and seventh regiment," until they threw him out.

COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER, the celebrated young writer of circus stories, is as bald as the well-known eagle and not at all sensitive about it. At a table at the Dutch Treat the other day they were giving him a gentle razzing about his lack of hair.

"You never saw bum furniture with a marble top," replied Cooper.

"Nor grass growing out of cement, either," cracked Ray Long.

ADD big hugs for Police Commissioner Whalen: New York policemen are no longer permitted to solicit ordinary citizens to buy tickets to benefits or other rackets.

AN observing young private secretary has discovered prominent New Yorkers may usually be found in their offices on Wednesday. "That's the day they get back from their week-ends," she explains.

AT the big theatrical first nights they are called "the ermine wrap show-offs." And if you attend you get the idea. If you don't, never mind. It isn't important, anyway.

AND here's real summer—in person!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE Boston Evening American will, from time to time, print letters on timely subjects from its readers. These should be short and include the name and address of the writer, but not necessarily for publication.

Editor Boston American:

The following letter is sent to you in the hope that it will come to the attention of the South End politicians in and out of office, and we sincerely hope you will see fit to publish it.

From time to time during the last eight years numerous protests have been made at the deplorable condition under which baseball and football are played at Randolph St. Playground, South End. In most cases these protests have been unavailing.

In the first place, there is a serious defect in the drain pipe, preventing the water from being drawn off after a rain. Following a heavy rain the playground becomes a reservoir of water, and all that the disappointed ball players can do is to wait until the sun gets in its work of evaporation. This sometimes takes a week.

The remains of what was once a fence is in a sad state of dilapidation. Only parts of it are standing. Some sections are in danger of collapsing at any time. Baseballs hit or thrown are very likely to strike passersby on adjacent streets.

The diamonds are certainly in need of grading. The rocks used as foundation filling years ago are beginning to appear above the surface. The locker building is another antique. It should have been dismantled years ago. If the park commissioners really had in mind the best interests of the users of the playground they would have constructed a high fence—30 or more feet high—on some sides of the field. Although the playground is the home ground for many teams, it is very discouraging to arrange baseball games there, owing to the many baseballs lost over the fences of nearby lumber yards. A high fence would partly remedy this.

Playgrounds in other sections of the city have been made up-to-date, but Randolph St. Playground is still listed among the "uncompleted playgrounds." Because it is located at the extreme end of Ward 3, and because the political power of the district is in the West End, the councillors and representatives of the section have interested themselves but little in this matter.

Randolph St. Playground is used by more baseball teams than any playground in Boston. It should be made modern at once. Any delay is inexcusable. In the annual appropriations of the park department, however, it is always overlooked. The plaint of the department has always been poverty. "We haven't the money for these things," they tell us; yet every year other playgrounds in other sections of Boston are having much money spent on them.

Captain Randolph All-Stars.
